U. S. LINER SAVES 36 IN 2 SINKINGS

NEW YORK, Oct. 13 (AP)—The American liner President Harding radioed today she had rescued the crew of 36 of the British freighter Heronspool while proceeding to aid the attacked French tanker Emile Miguet. The Heronspool was sunk off the Irish coast. The Harding said it found the tanker in flames.

Capt. James E. Roberts sent the following message to the United States Lines in New York:

"At 2:10 p. m. (New York Time) Thursday responded to SOS from French tanker W. Emile Miguet in latitude 50.08 north longitude 14 west. At 1:50 a. m. sighted and rescued crew of 36 in boat from British steamer Heronspool. None missing. Reached Emile Miguet afire. No sign of crew. Proceeded at 9:37 a. m."

The Harding left Le Verdon Oct. 11 for New York with 597 passengers aboard. The Emile Miguet left Houston, Texas, Sept. 17 with 136,087 barrels of crude oil. Her tonnage of 14,115 made her one of the largest oil tankers afloat. She was presumably bound for Le Havre.

(International News Service dispatches from London said the Heronspool, a vessel of 5202 tons, was attacked by a U-boat, according to announcement by the admiralty.)

U. S. ONLY HOPE, BERLIN'S VIEW

By PIERRE J. HUSS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, Oct. 13—Adolf Hitler has spoken his last word and the machinery of the most frightful war in the world's history can now be stopped only if the United States will intervene.

This was the attitude of the German Government as expressed by authentic quarters today as Berlin officialdom railed against the "impudence and insults" of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's address to the House of Commons yesterday.

Inferentially, but none the less emphatically, Germany placed the responsibility for war or peace upon the shoulders of America.

The German viewpoint was reiterated in the wake of a statement by Dr. Otto Dietrich, German press chief and a close confidant of the Fuehrer.

"Hitler feels that any further initiative by himself would be futile," a spokesman said. "He has no thought again of stretching out his hand and having it rudely slapped down again."

As German official opinion thus marshalled itself for the beginning of a "blood bath" without a parallel in the world's history, first reports reached Berlin of renewed French initiative on the western front.

FRENCH DYNAMITE BRIDGES
The French are dynamiting several Rhine river bridges, underlining the likelihood of open conflict in the near future, but it was still felt in Berlin that the possibility of a peace move by President Roosevelt will act as a brake upon the war machine and defer a wholesale outburst for several days more at least.

(Editor's Note—A report was current in Amsterdam that Hitler had established headquarters on the Siegfried line. There was no confirmation in Berlin, however, of reports that he had already gone to the front.)

In the German viewpoint, the full fury and destruction of war can be stemmed now only if a suitable neutral nation takes the initiative. It was made clear that direct German dealings with England had been made impossible by Chamberlain's speech. The German language, rich in vitriol when the need arises, expended itself in condemnation of the Prime Minister.

Roosevelt Hits Off on Hitler's New Bid to Stop War

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 (INS)—President Roosevelt today brushed aside new but indirect suggestions from Berlin that the United States intervene to bring peace in Europe.

At the same time, the President told his press conference that he expected a reply from Moscow to this government's appeal for the maintenance of peace between Soviet Russia and Finland.

Mr. Roosevelt took special care to emphasize that the United States was not bringing pressure on Soviet Russia, but hoped, through diplomatic representation, to avert an extension of the conflict to the Baltic.

NO OFFICIAL WORD

The President declined to comment directly on the suggestions from Berlin that this government step in to stop "war in earnest" between Germany and the Franco-British allies.

He reminded correspondents of his statement of last week that he had received no official word from any of the warring countries as to possible mediation.

Mr. Roosevelt then said he still had received no official communication from any government abroad.

The President's attitude indicated once more that neither he nor this government will intervene for peace without formal invitations from the powers involved and, particularly, that he will continue to ignore "feelers" put out in Berlin without expressed official authority.

There has been no official recognition whatever of peace suggestions from Berlin, although apparently inspired by the German government. Mr. Roosevelt made quite plain that there will be no recognition until the suggestions come in formal and official form.

The President, one observer pointed out, is not likely to forget that one of his most urgent peace appeals to Adolf Hitler was answered in a sarcastic speech before the Reichstag.

U. S. ALARMED

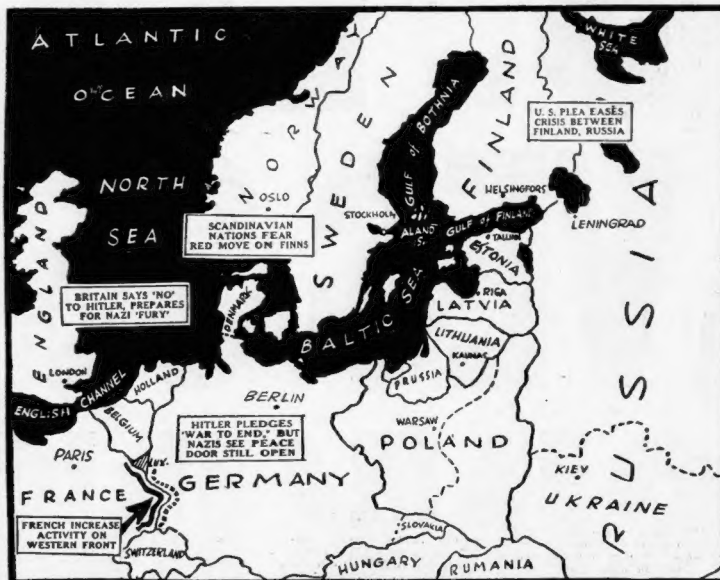

Emphasizing this government's caution in entering into the Soviet-Finnish dispute, Mr. Roosevelt outlined the three days of consideration that he gave to the question of making official representations.

On Monday of this week, the President said, officials in the United States became alarmed over the ominous Baltic situation. The thought was that the situation might be heading toward an extension of the European war in this area.

On Tuesday, the President recalled, several Scandinavian diplomats called on the Secretary of State to discuss the Baltic problem.

There never was any suggestion of joint diplomatic action by the United States and Scandinavian nations, the President insisted.

AS EUROPE HOVERS ON BRINK OF 'REAL WAR'

CRITICAL situation existed in Europe today, with Herr Hitler declaring a "war to the end" in the face to Britain refusal of peace terms, but holding the peace door open with a hint at Roosevelt intervention. Britain got ready for war on large scale, while French attacked on west front with renewed zeal. Roosevelt's plea to Russia for amicable settlement of Finnish question lessened tension in that quarter somewhat but Scandinavian countries viewed with apprehension the Finland-Soviet trouble.

War Diary

43d Day

Behind the Front—German government circles insisted today Hitler has spoken his last word. They said only intervention by President Roosevelt can check a war of bloody fury. But from Washington came word from President Roosevelt himself that he had received no official word from any of the warring countries as to possible mediation. Since no formal request has been made, he indicated that the United States could not very well offer its services as a mediator. British quarters scoffed at the Nazi appeal as a "last minute plea from a badly-cornered man."

Italy, despairing, saw "total war" inevitable in two weeks. Denmark heard Russia would sign a military pact with Germany within "hours."

While Germany was thus preparing a gigantic air, land and sea thrust, Russia calmly nibbled away at the Baltic states. An American appeal for Stalin to spare Finland was reported quietly received, but it appeared the Finns would, by force of circumstances, be compelled to yield to some extent to the Moscow bid for protective bases off the Finnish coast.

On the Sea—Resumption of German submarine warfare came with attacks on two vessels, one British, one French, and the rescue of the crew of the British boat by the United States liner President Harding. The French boat, a tanker, was found in flames, with no sign of her crew.

On the Front—French troops on the West Front were reported ready for the expected German thrust. There was no more than "patrol activity" reported.

SOVIET TO JOIN WAR, SAY DANES

LONDON, Oct. 13 (INS)—According to Danish correspondents in Berlin, it is considered only a question of hours before Soviet Russia signs a military pact with Germany under which the U. S. S. R. would join in the war against the Anglo-French allies, a Reuter dispatch from Copenhagen said today. The dispatch added, however, that the Germans are formulating plans independently of Russia and with the aid of Italian negotiations.

Britain May Balk Peace Move by U. S.

By CHARLES A. SMITH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Oct. 13 (INS)—Informed British quarters scoffed today at suggestions put forward by a spokesman of Chancellor Hitler that President Roosevelt intervene to end the European war.

In Whitehall this comment was heard:

"It sounds like the last-minute plea from a man who is badly cornered."

"It seems ironic that Hitler is appealing to the man whom the Nazis so frequently and roundly have abused."

(Such a British stand was interpreted by observers to indicate that any negotiations involving the United States were doomed. It was previously pointed out that even if Hitler made a direct appeal to President Roosevelt, this nation would not act without the assent of both Britain and France.)

One high quarter said that a radio broadcast to the British people by Prit Minister Neville Chamberlain, originally scheduled for tomorrow night, is now considered "improbable but no definitely ruled out."

The difficulty, was stated, was that in view of his rejection in the House of Commons of Hitler's peace offers, the Prime Minister would find it hard to carry the situation further at such short notice.

It also was stated that there will be no direct broadcast to the United States by Chamberlain, but that American radio companies still can arrange to relay Chamberlain's radio address tomorrow if it is made.

SMOKE OVER REVERE

Billowing smoke clouds soared over Revere today as fire swept a grass field behind the Wonderland dogtrack. Two fire companies were called out.

CAMBRIDGE BUS VICTIMS—Some of the 20 injured in Cambridge's Harvard Sq.-Belmont bus crash are treated at Municipal Hospital, where they were taken after the two big cars collided at Garden and Mason sts.

2 HELD AS GIRL PAYS WITH LIFE FOR SECRET LOVE

Believed the victim of a clandestine love affair, dark-haired, attractive Miss Barbara H. Hanson, 21, recent graduate of a Boston business school, was found dead today in a disordered sixth floor room at a downtown hotel.

When her body was discovered it was still clad in an expensive evening dress.

A young man who was in the room with the dead girl when police arrived was held for questioning. And after he had told his story a second man was also taken in custody.

Then, while the circumstances surrounding the mystery death were still perplexing police investigators, the victim's sister, Mrs. Hilda J. Hale, also beautiful and strikingly resembling Miss Hanson, came to the North End police station.

SISTER TELLS STORY

She, too, was clad in a becoming evening costume.

In tears and near collapse from the shock of learning of her sister's death, she sketched what she knew of the situation's tragic love background.

According to her story, her sister Barbara lived with her in Stratford st., West Roxbury. Mrs. Hale had known of Barbara's ill-starred romance, she said, but she had not realized it had progressed secretly to a point where her attractive sister feared she was to become a mother.

FEARED DISGRACE

Such apparently had been the case, however. And in fear of disgrace, Barbara, according to police, had taken a desperate expedient which cost her life.

Police said they believed the first man they questioned—the man who was in the room with the victim—was not directly responsible for her death and was not the man with whom she had the love affair.

SWEETHEART SOUGHT

This first man, they said, admitted he had assisted in arranging for illegal surgery to be performed upon Miss Hanson.

The second man taken for questioning was the one police accused of having actually performed the operation.

Allegedly named by Mrs. Hale was a third man, sought today as the clandestine sweetheart.

Meantime, police were piecing together the unfortunate love victim's personal background.

They said she was talented and popular, the daughter of Prof.

20 Hurt as El Buses Crash in Cambridge

Twenty persons, including passengers and the two operators, were injured today when two Boston Elevated buses crashed at Garden and Mason sts., Cambridge.

So great was the force of the impact that the headlights of an inbound bus from Arlington Heights to Harvard sq. were imbedded in the side of an outbound bus for Belmont as the latter was carried across Garden st.

Traffic was tied up in Garden st., main automobile thoroughfare, and it was necessary to re-route heavy rush hour motor traffic.

The injured, all treated at Cambridge Municipal Hospital, were: John S. Buckler, 48, of West Moreland st., Arlington, operator of the bus to Belmont, possible fractured shoulder.

Bernard Donegan, 50, of Bow st., Arlington, operator of bus from Arlington, injuries to abdomen, knees and legs.

Alta Cromalti, 22, Howard st., Cambridge, chin lacerations.

William H. Carter, 47, Fayerweather st., Cambridge, back and shoulder.

Melvin Newstadter, 18, Columbia rd., South Boston, possible internal injuries.

Josephine Pennino, 26, Brighton st., Belmont, face and knee injuries; Helen Pennino, 19, head and leg injuries.

Earl C. Jenkins, 35, of Auburn st., Cambridge, back injuries.

Margaret Ribbico, 23, Griswold st., Cambridge, shoulder and knee.

Theresa Sandagati, 24, Bay State rd., Cambridge, both legs injured.

Violet Hayward, 40, Magee st., Cambridge, back and legs.

Lillian Cox, 42, Braddock pk., Boston, head injuries.

Nicholas Grecco, 52, Porter st., Cambridge, head injuries.

George J. Boklan, 53, Prescott st., Cambridge, head injuries.

Salvig Marcortullo, 27, State st., Cambridge, shaken up.

Dorothy Jones, 26, Concord ave., Cambridge.

Raymond McKinnon, 35, Ripley rd., Belmont.

Mary Wise, 65, Fayerweather st., Cambridge.

Charles Tatuto, 32, West st., Cambridge.

John Riley, 18, Cambridge st., Cambridge.

Passengers and Operator Donegan on the inbound bus for Harvard sq. said this bus was proceeding about 20 miles an hour in Garden st. when the outbound bus swung east out of Mason st., a narrow thoroughfare through which outbound buses are compelled to travel because of the Cambridge one-way street rule.

Donegan said he attempted to swing wide and clear the other bus but was unable to do so and struck the outbound bus on the side, driving this vehicle part way across Garden st.

Private cars and taxicabs were pressed into service to augment police ambulances in rushing the injured to the hospital.

HOLD DOCTOR AS FAKE

Limping from bullet wounds he said he received from "affairs of honor" in his native Puerto Rico, slim, dark-eyed "Dr." Cayetano Puig of Huntington ave., Back Bay, was brought into Municipal Court today on charges of attempted larceny and practicing medicine without a license.

Police alleged that Puig operated a fake diploma mill, selling forged medical school and chiropractic school certificates to dupes all over Greater Boston and New England.

Arrest of the Puerto Rican defendant today was on warrants granted by Judge Jennie Loftman Barron.

The attempted larceny warrant charged that Puig tried to obtain $100 from Arthur Stedman of Rockview so, Jamaica Plain, as price of a forged certificate purporting to be from the "Philadelphia Chiropractic College."

Police said Puig's own "medical certificate" was a fake and was from a non-existent "Academy of Medicine and Surgery" at Washington, D. C.

Puig allegedly admitted having served a state prison term in New York for practicing there without a license.

MORE SOLONS FIGHT EMBARGO REPEAL

La Follette Plea Spurs Opposition

By EDWARD B. LOCKETT
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 (INS)—Senator A. B. "Happy" Chandler, Kentucky, the Senate's newest member, moved himself into the "doubtful" column today on the question of repealing the neutrality act arms embargo.

The administration's confidential poll lists the Kentuckian as "supporting" its arms repeal bill because he gave out a statement before he came to the Senate Tuesday approving its "general principles."

Chandler, today, told International News Service that after listening to three days of debate he has decided to "vote on the bill and any amendments strictly on their merits," he added:

"I gave out a statement saying I favored the bill's general principles but I am not pledged. I will vote on an amendment striking the embargo repeal section from the bill according to my conviction as to what's best to keep us out of war. I have not decided which way I will vote."

CHAVEZ TO VOTE "NO"

Chandler, it was learned, privately questioned Sen. LaFollette after LaFollette concluded a ringing attack on the embargo repeal bill.

The action of Chandler coincided with several developments favorable to forces fighting the administration bill, among them the surprise announcement of Sen. Chavez (D.) of New Mexico, that he would vote against the bill.

A little earlier Sen. White (R.)

295,000 Words And That Ain't The Half of It

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 (AP)—More than 295,000 words have been spoken in the Senate's neutrality debate—and the members still are going strong. The estimate came from the official shorthand reporters, who take down every word for the Congressional Record.

International News Photograph Service

NEUTRALITY FOES—Sen. Bob LaFollette of Wisconsin, left, who blasted the Administration's support of the neutrality act embargo repeal, chats in friendly fashion with Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio, son of the former President, even though the latter is all for repeal.

of Maine, announced he would not vote for the bill "in its present form." White had previously been listed "on the fence."

In a bitter Senate debate on repeal of the arms embargo law, French and British assistance pledges were blamed by Senator Bulow (D.) of South Dakota, for Poland's downfall. Embargo retention would force England and France to "patch up a peace" with Hitler, and soon Hitler and Soviet Dictator Stalin "will be at each other's throat," he said.

Young Senator "Bob" LaFollette (P.) of Wisconsin, declared embargo repeal would be hailed as a "military victory" by England and France and condemned by Germany as "intervention." He asserted British foreign policy should be "disturbed."

YOUNG BOB STEALS SHOW

Bulow, lanky and soft-spoken cowman from the plains, and "Young Bob," who recalled the bitter feeling against his father, "Fighting Bob," in the Senate, when the elder LaFollette opposed America's entry into the World War a decade ago, "stole" the Senate show.

With no end of debate in sight, majority leader Barkley, of Kentucky, appealed to isolationists and repealists to cooperate toward a speedy conclusion to permit work on proposed amendments. The isolation bloc, meantime, planned to play for further time in the House that more votes may be swung to their side.

AMENDMENT OFFERED

An amendment to modify the shipping restrictions was urged by Sen. Bailey (D.) of North Carolina, chairman of the commerce committee, and is backed by the maritime commission. Their statements that proposed restrictions would "seriously disrupt, curtail and injure" the merchant marine were inserted into the record.

Bailey proposed that American shipping to belligerent ports "separated from the mother country" be continued. He said shipping to Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, French Indo-China, Hongkong and Straits Settlements should be allowed.

Eucharist Congress Cancelled by War

VATICAN CITY, Oct. 13 (AP)—The Vatican announced today that the International Eucharistic Congress which was to have been held at Nice, France, next spring had been cancelled because of the European war.

'We Must Not Take Sides,' Senator Warns

Special to Boston Evening American

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13—The Senate was warned today by Sen. Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin that even the President's message on arms repeal was not free from taint.

I am impressed by the fact that many people in official life in Washington justify the repeal of the arms embargo privately on the ground that our national interest requires a policy which will insure victory for Great Britain and France.

But once we take sides since war is declared, knowing we are taking sides, repeal can only be interpreted at home and abroad as a step taken by our government for the purpose of partial participation in the European war.

There are ominous suggestions that a war boom would help to solve our problems. In this direction lies disaster.

Sees Embargo Repeal Step Toward War

Special to Boston Evening American

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13—Sen. Robert M. LaFollette (P.) of Wisconsin told the Senate today that:

Repeal of the embargo, in the present circumstances, and the sale of arms, ammunition and implements of war is a significant step toward participation in the European war. The several discretionary loopholes in the pending bill are sufficient to allow for incidents which may lead us into war.

It is not in the best interest of American democracy to gamble everything of value which we possess in return for some temporary profits together with a permanent participation in a post-war chaos certain to be revolutionary in character.

The proposed repeal of the arms embargo is not being undertaken in a vacuum. It is being proposed amid a set of circumstances, foreign and domestic, which cannot be ignored. The repeal itself cannot be considered as a naked issue removed from these circumstances. It must be examined in their glaring light.

Lodge in Air Talk on Arms Bill Tomorrow

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 (AP)—Sen. Lodge (R.) of Massachusetts, an opponent of repeal of the arms embargo, will discuss the pending neutrality bill, Saturday at 8 p. m. (EST) over a national radio hook-up (NBC).

HELD IN BEANO ROBBERY

A Watertown man was arrested for questioning today in connection with the holdup of Charles Wells, 43, of Waltham st., South End, who was robbed of a $100 beano prize in the doorway of his home.

Sub Flotilla In Caribbean

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 (AP)—Rep. Snyder (D.) of Pennsylvania returned from an inspection of Caribbean fortifications today with a story of extensive foreign submarine operations near United States soil.

Snyder, chairman of the House military appropriations subcommittee, said Governor Lawrence Cramer of the Virgin Islands had expressed the opinion to him that a flotilla of foreign submarines had been in the Caribbean since early August.

Cramer did not name the nationality of the undersea craft, Snyder said.

"Some were of the opinion," the Congressman said, "that a big submarine was bringing fuel and other supplies to a number of submarines of a smaller type."

Finland Calls on Civilians to Be Ready for Any Emergency

HELSINKI, Oct. 13 (AP)—President Kyoesti Kallio issued a decree today ordering all Finnish civilians to hold themselves in readiness to aid the government in non-military pursuits if required by the present emergency.

The decree was issued as Finnish leaders continued to express optimism concerning their chances of receiving acceptable terms from Soviet Russia as the second day of Finnish-Russian talks began in Moscow.

They hoped their country would fare better than Baltic neighbors which have become virtual Russian protectorates as a result of Kremlin parleys.

PREPARES TO FIGHT

The decree put into effect regulations previously drawn providing for wartime emergencies. The services of all citizens may be required for work applied directly or indirectly in connection with national defense. The nation stepped up preparations to fight, if necessary, for its independence in keeping with the foreign minister's declaration that Finland would resist dictation.

Foreign Minister Elias Erkkio made his statement in a radio broadcast after Finland had learned of United States representations to the Soviet government on her behalf.

The brief speech was diverted from the United States at the last moment when the German radio had refused to relay it allegedly on the ground that it was "political."

"WILL TO PEACE"

It was broadcast, however, to Finland's Scandinavian neighbors. Erkkio reaffirmed to them Finland's will to peace but, he said, "she cannot submit or comply with the dictates of an outside factor which would result in her international and political activity being dependent on something other than her own free will."

Without mentioning Russia, he proclaimed Finland's "full right... to expect other nations to respect her integrity and not to threaten her safety."

He praised the United States as a "great and free nation inspired by a sense of justice, protection and defense of democratic principles from which nations draw strong moral support."

Cabinet members, meanwhile, studied a "long message" received last night from Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, former premier and head of the Finnish mission to Russia.

IN DARK ON DEMANDS

Finns thus far have not been enlightened on what Russia wants from Finland and there was no inkling of the contents.

But whatever it contained, precautionary measures went forward energetically and a government spokesman disclosed further strengthening of the frontiers.

Helinski police reported that tens of thousands of residents had left the city and the voluntary exodus was expected to include about 124,000 of the city's approximately 300,000 inhabitants.

Optimists drew comfort from

BULLETINS

LONDON, Oct. 13 (AP)—Sir John Gilmour, who held two cabinet portfolios in peacetime, was appointed today as wartime minister for shipping.

LONDON, Oct. 13 (INS)—Germany is reported to be reinforcing her border forces on the Lithuanian frontier, the London News Chronicle said today in a dispatch from Kaunas.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 13 (INS)—The Danish warship Oeresund yesterday fired on but did not damage two German naval planes flying over territorial waters, the foreign office announced today.

BUCHAREST, Oct. 13 (INS)—Rumanian troops withdrawn from the Hungarian frontier under the recent Rumanian-Hungarian agreement are now being rushed to Bessarabia because of a possible Soviet Russian move in that direction, it was disclosed today.

The absence of early reports on the Kremlin conversations, inferring that the Russian demands at least had not seemed so unreasonable that no basis could be found for discussions.

Neutral Pleas Bolster Finns' Stand With Reds

MOSCOW, Oct. 13 (AP)—Little Finland's position for dickering today with big Soviet Russia has been improved by the diplomatic backing of the United States, Sweden, Denmark and Norway.

The Washington government and the three Scandinavian countries in effect urged Russia not to make demands upon Finland which might endanger Russian-Finnish relations.

The representations were made yesterday about the time Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, Finnish minister to Sweden, and his aides—here in response to a Soviet invitation to talk about political and economic matters—had their first session with Soviet leaders.

The Finns were closeted for an hour at the Kremlin with Joseph Stalin, Foreign Commissar-Premier Vyacheslav Molotov, Assistant Foreign Commissar Vladimir Potemkin and Vladimir Derevianski, Russian Minister to Poland up to the time of the Russian-German partition of that nation.

This conference was in the nature of a preliminary for conversations to come.

It was reliably but unofficially reported that some form of agreement between Russia and Turkey was expected to be signed within the next day or so.

Although nothing was obtainable from either side on the nature of the prospective pact, it was believed it would settle questions in relation to the Black Sea and the Dardanelles and would define the Soviet and Turkish positions toward each other in the current European situation.

Nazi Troops Garbed In Armor, Rome Says

ROME, Oct. 13 (INS)—A fantastic description of Germany's new war methods on the Western Front including infantrymen dressed in duralumin armor was presented by the Italian press today.

The German forces, the newspapers said, have "wasps nests" of motor-cycle machine gun carriers, gun-carrying cavalry units and aerial mine fields.

Each German infantry unit has chosen a group of expert marksmen with great physical strength who are employed as shock troops and equipped with shields, ingeniously jointed to permit freedom of movement.

The breastplate of this armor was described as 112 millimeters thick and the breastplate, visored helmet and cheek pieces together weigh less than an ordinary knapsack.

Nevertheless, the papers said, the armor cannot be penetrated by the fire of small arms.

CARRY SUB-MACHINE GUNS

The armor, according to these accounts, instills greater confidence in soldiers when they are attacking positions or holding ground against enemy counter-assaults.

They carry sub-machine guns which can fire 120 rounds a minute and also are equipped with large, broad-bladed daggers.

Italian newspapers said the armored German troops first appeared on the western front during a rain-storm.

When the French glimpsed their shining metal armor, they mistook them for gas cylinders and hastily prepared for a gas attack, it was stated.

The "wasps nests" are designed to catch parties of reconnoitering troops unawares. The specially armored motorcycles are equipped with one heavy machine gun each, which is set up on the ground, and to the handbars. The nests also are equipped with two repeating rifles.

FOUR MEN TO EACH CYCLE

In all, four men man each motorcycle and each is equipped with armor. They operate in groups of six or seven machines which are claimed to constitute miniature steel fortresses with deadly firepower.

The German cavalry is equipped with small guns attached to special saddles and designed for rapid maneuvers.

The aerial mine fields are formed by balloons at various heights which can be exploded by ground observers. The force of the explosion is said to be capable of destroying a plane within an area twenty times the radius of the balloon.

It was claimed that one French plane already has fallen victim to an aerial mine.

Babson Sees F.D. Win If He Keeps U. S. Out

SA FRANCISCO, Oct. 13 (AP)—Economist Roger Babson believes President Roosevelt would be a "cinch" for re-election if he keeps the United States out of war until November, 1940.

"Both parties will use the slogan, 'We kept you out of war.' But after 1940 if Europe wants us we'll be at war."

FRENCH BRACE FOR NAZI FURY

By KENNETH T. DOWNS
International News Service
Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Oct. 13 (INS)—When and where Adolf Hitler will launch an offensive on the Western Front now that he has decided Great Britain's rejection of his peace offer necessitates "the most gruesome blood bath in history" occupied attention of the French high command and council of ministers today.

While hundreds of thousands of French and British troops stood steadfast all along the 120-mile Maginot line, the military situation was canvassed in exhaustive detail by the ministerial council.

A communique announced that the entire nation stood behind Premier Edouard Daladier's decision that the war must continue until the spirit of German domination is crushed.

Construction of pontoon bridges across the Rhine near Mayence (Mainz) and over the Saar east of Luxembourg indicated a direct attack in these regions.

There is a "possibility" such tactics may be used, military officials said, although they insisted that French entrenchments, backed by the Maginot line, were more than sufficient to repel the onslaught.

Excellent weather prevailing during the last 24 hours enabled intensified patrol activity along the entire front. Night-time German patrols involved the use of as many as 150 men at a time.

There was light counter-battery artillery action by the French to break up barrages intended to be reached a maximum, it was claimed, colder weather early this morning slowed up the movement to some extent.

French counter patrols were active in the wooded areas of the Moselle valley at Sarlouis, Saarbrücken, Zwickbrücken, Pirmasens, Wissembourg, and Lauterbourg.

As far as the Germans are concerned, the artillery duel has reached a maximum, it was claimed, although the French have not yet unleashed the full power of their heavy guns.

French quarters stated that the strength of the positions which the French troops have consolidated on German soil was proved by the fact that the Germans have been unable to take a single prisoner during the past three days.

The Germans have been unable to smash the advanced French positions, it was asserted, despite intensive combat tactics.

On each occasion they have been hurled back by the highly mechanized French curtain of fire.

Red Cross Now Has $1,000,000 War Fund

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 (AP)—Chairman Norman H. Davis announced today that the American Red Cross had appropriated $1,000,000 for immediate relief needs in the European war.

"If the need develops, we will have to make a regular war fund drive," Davis said.

"The Red Cross is ready to do everything practicable that the American people want it to do."

STATE CALLS FOR BIDS

Bids on $5,300,000 tax-exempt bonds have been called for by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, $5,000,000 a metropolitan additional water loan and $300,000 a flood protection loan. Proposals will be received up to noon, Oct. 23, when offers will be examined.

New Cruiser Type U. S. Sub on Trial Run

PROVINCETOWN, Oct. 13 (AP)—A U. S. Navy trial board from Washington inspected the new cruiser type submarine Sea Lion today on her builder's trial runs over the Navy's measured mile testing course.

It was reported trials were successful and that the new submarine, built by the Electric Boat Company of New London, Ct., would be accepted formally in about a month. Her skipper will be Lieut. J. S. Morrison, Jr., connected with the salvaging of the submarine Squalus.

GIRL, 9, DAD IN FIRST MEETING

NEW YORK, Oct. 13 (INS)—A little girl with big brown eyes stared gravely at a man whose eyes were remarkably the same. He was Everett Marshall, noted baritone.

"This is your daddy, Belan," the eight-year-old child was told.

"Hello," she said. "Can you play the piano?"

It was the first time that Marshall had ever seen his only child, separated from him first by the width of the Atlantic, and later by the legal difficulties between him and the little girl's mother, Carolina Segrada Marshall.

At first, every time Belan's daddy coaxed her to talk to him, she covered her face with a handkerchief, or skipped out of the room.

The little girl herself finally broke the ice when she told her famous dad that she would like to watch his performance at the World's Fair.

Within a few minutes, the big baritone and the little girl in embroidered blue voile were sitting next to each other on the piano bench, playing "chopsticks."

BLIND IN PEACE PLEA

High 'C' Note In Sea Trade

U.S. SHOWS MIGHT OF NEW GUNS

ABERDEEN PROVING GROUND, Md., Oct. 13.—The army has demonstrated publicly for the first time the power of its electrically-aimed anti-aircraft guns, only to revive speculation over their effectiveness against bombing planes at extreme altitudes.

Targets towed by bombers at 10,000 feet, before an audience composed of army ordnance association members, were centered now and then in bursting three-inch shells yesterday, but a large proportion of the projectiles trailed the targets by several hundred feet.

Army bombers consistently practice on targets from altitudes of 20,000 feet and above. What accuracy the guns, operated in batteries of four and firing en masse, 100 shots a minute, would be able to attain at that height, army officers at the proving ground declined to estimate.

The maximum range of the guns is about 30,000 feet.

Less question met the performance of bombers dropping 2,000-pound projectiles from 10,000 feet. Two planes within minutes of each other planted their bombs at almost the same spot on the target range.

It was an exhibition of "directive" bombing as against "objective" bombing widely practiced abroad, and showed the accuracy of the army's highly secret bomb sighting device, which compensates for all the variables such as air speed, altitude and wind.

Police Halt Runaway's 'Trip to Dublin'

He's got the blue of Killarney in his eyes, the gold of the Kerry hills in his hair, and a touch of the Blarney to his tongue . . . And so he started to talk his way to Dublin.

Sidetracked for a little while at the Roxbury police station today, where he had gone in search of a bit of food, a cup of a hot drink, and a friendly word, he told the wondering policemen that it was just two years since he had come from there, and now he wanted to go back.

Helpful, they were, and they fed him, and talked to him—even a little gaelic from Patrolman Coleman Costello, who knows about such things.

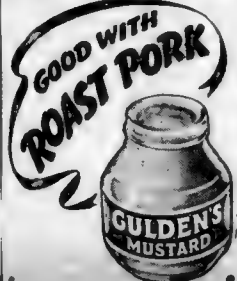

But filled by the food and warmed by the drink, he told them the true story.

He is Michael O'Callahan, Jr., 18, and he lives on 16th st. in New York, where his father is an engineer in a hospital. He has been to Ireland, true, and he'd like to go back there, but, just now, he's only a runaway boy, far from home, and homesick.

So they took care of that, too, his friends, the police. As you read this, he's half way back to the arms of his mother. And, probably, will never run away again.

6 HURT IN WRECK

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 13 (INS)—Six persons—five Negro porters and a woman—were injured today when the Pennsylvania R. R. passenger train "Golden Arrow," bound for New York from Chicago, collided with a freight train in West Philadelphia.

First Lady Sees U. S. 'United for Peace'

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 (INS)—America is a nation united at this time to remain at peace, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt declared, addressing the Women's National Democratic Club here.

The First Lady added that she hoped this country would continue to be a united nation in a desire not only to stay at peace but to see peace come to the world. This evoked loud applause.

To secure peace Mrs. Roosevelt expressed the thought that we should have prepared for it better at home than we have done during the past 25 years.

Peace through peace agencies is less effective than peace through co-operation, and we must not let difficulties grow until they are too great to stop, she said.

The world has late force creep in, in circumstances, which should have been settled by reason, she declared.

Asked what women of a democracy can do to keep peace at home, Mrs. Roosevelt advised the Democratic women to know their own communities, to study conditions at home.

She said she was often impressed, in going around the country, that the people who accompanied her were seeing their own home conditions for the first time.

The people of America may be called upon to do a great deal to help civilian populations of other countries for which all must feel a responsibility, she declared.

Most people are thankful they are living in this country, she said, but they have got to justify this thankfulness by doing real work for things thought secure that are not so secure as they were thought to be.

100,000 SKIP HUB'S '39 POLL TAX

Because of an "unwholesome tradition of nonpayment" among these able to pay, about 100,000 persons will fail to pay Boston poll taxes this year, according to a report of the committee on municipal finance of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, issued by Fred A. Dakin.

Since 1932, poll tax collections in Boston have not averaged over 50 per cent, the committee finds, after a study. The reason for the poor showing is political opposition to the necessary efforts to force payment. Public protest has, on several occasions, called a halt on the use of constables and other methods allowed by law.

Of the 250,000 persons assessed a poll tax this year about 25,000 are entitled to exemption, although most of them will not bother to request it, or to pay the tax, the committee predicts. About 125,000 are expected to pay the tax. The remaining 100,000 will not do so. The committee finds that no solution has been found of how to compel payment.

4000 SEE HUB'S HORSE SHOW OPEN

Launched with gala opening ceremonies attended by a capacity audience, the Boston Horse Show now in its 12th year, was in full swing today.

Governor and Mrs. Saltonstall, escorted by a full military delegation, occupied the positions of honor at the east end of Commonwealth Armory.

Most spectacular of the 12 scheduled events was an exhibition of pyramid riding by a group from Troop E of the 110th cavalry, which is sponsoring the meet.

Enthusiastic applause from the 4000 spectators greeted the execution of troop formations by the mounted troop of the Boston police department.

Outstanding performance was Luke Overly upon Chester Dare Chief, who was awarded top honors in the class 19, five-gaited stallion or gelding competition.

GOVERNOR AND MRS. SALTONSTALL

Mass Whippings At San Quentin

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 13 (AP)—The Chronicle, in a copyrighted story today, said four San Quentin prison guards had admitted participating in a mass whipping with lead-tipped leather straps of 41 young prisoners who had refused to take "torture" punishment for their part in a hunger strike last February and March.

Three members of the State Prison Board have been asked to resign, the paper said, but declared last night they would not quit on ground that an investigation had failed to produce proof of the alleged beatings.

The Chronicle said Gov. Culbert L. Olson "plans a clean sweep of the entire State prison administration as a result of the beatings, with Warden Court Smith of San Quentin slated for ouster first and Warden Clyde Plummer of Folsom prison next."

650,000 WILL GET PAY RISE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 (AP)—Officials estimated today that 650,000 American workers would get pay increases and an additional 1,000,000 would get shorter hours or overtime pay when automatic changes take place in the wage-hour law, Oct. 24.

On that date, the law provides that 30 cents an hour shall become the minimum wage and 42 hours the maximum work week for employees whose products move in interstate commerce.

The standards will replace the 25-cent hourly minimum and 41-hour maximum week in effect for the first year of the act's operation.

At the same time about 175,000 textile workers are expected to get pay increases under the 32½ cent hourly minimum ordered for their industry by Elmer A. Andrews, wage-hour administrator, on recommendation of the textile industry committee.

An estimated 46,000 hosiery workers, meantime, are receiving wage increases which became effective Sept. 13 as a result of the 32½ and 40-cent minimum ordered for the seamless and full-fashioned divisions, respectively.

Preliminary figures place the total wage increase expected from the higher standards for all industries at $109,000,000 for the year, beginning Oct. 24.

Wage-hour officials estimated that 450,000 employees in the United States, employing in excess of 12,000,000 persons, are covered by the act.

Other wage increases generally are expected by wage-hour officials to follow those due directly to the advance of the legal minimum rates.

Absolve Patrolman In Fatal Shooting

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 13—Patrolman Ambrose M. Farrell today was absolved of any liability in the fatal shooting of Milton Dudley, 24, of Bates st., on the ground he fired in self defense.

The bureau of police and fire gave Officer Farrell a complete bill of health after testimony that Dudley swung the policeman's nightstick in a vain attempt to escape from a cruising car and was shot through the heart.

4 Men Face Court In Horse Room Raid

MALDEN, Oct. 13—Four men faced court here today as the result of a raid on a horse room on Lincoln st. here. Police seized a quantity of paraphernalia, including form sheets, slips, and an amplifier.

The raid was staged as a result of a complaint by Thomas F. McManus, unsuccessful candidate for mayor at Tuesday's primaries.

Pell Offers Estate As High School Site

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 13—Herbert C. Pell, American minister to Portugal and former member of the Democratic national committee, has offered his palatial estate to the city for use as a high school.

The offer was made in a letter to the Newport school committee, which has been searching for a suitable location for a proposed new high school.

Vt. Suicide Couple Buried Together

RUTLAND, Vt., Oct. 13 — The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Smith, found in the rear seat of their automobile, victims of carbon monoxide poisoning, were interred at a double funeral here.

Slain Boy's Mother 'Won't Forgive' Dad

NEW YORK, Oct. 13 (INS)—A careworn mother shouted bitter words of unforgiveness today for her husband, 33-year-old Louis Repouille, who chloroformed their imbecile son, a 13-year-old mute, blind and paralyzed boy who always acted "like dead" to the father.

"I feel bitter," sobbed Mrs. Repouille, a mother of four younger children. "He killed my baby. I'd like to see him punished for what he has done. Let him go to jail for a while. I'd take him back for the sake of the other children. I might forget what he did, but I'll never forgive him."

TORTURED BY THOUGHT

Tortured by the thought that the boy, who had been a financial and emotional burden since birth, never would recover, Repouille, a $50-a-week elevator operator, ended Little Raymond's suffering while Mrs. Repouille and the other children were absent from home yesterday.

He had been contemplating the "mercy" killing for some time and because Mrs. Repouille was aware of his intention she had guarded the boy she loved since the day he was born almost constantly. Yesterday she went shopping and Repouille, now charged with murder, carried out his plan.

HELD IN SON'S DEATH—Because his 13-year-old son had been crippled from birth and deaf, dumb and blind for the past eight years, Louis Repouille (center), New York elevator operator, allegedly confessed to having chloroformed him for "mercy's sake." He's pictured here in custody of Gotham detectives.

"My husband did this to punish me," said the hysterical mother. "He was angry with me because I drink a glass of beer every night. For two weeks he has been threatening he had chloroform in the house and would use it on the boy."

Recalling the love and devotion

she heaped upon her imbecile son, the grieving mother added:

"I used to have hopes that some day he would be normal. Brother was no good to anybody, but he didn't bother anybody either. He was my baby and I wanted him."

"He couldn't walk, he couldn't talk," mumbled Repouille as he described the killing. "I spent $300—all the money I had—on an operation, but that didn't do any good. Specialists charged me $25 a visit and told me that there was no hope."

Weather Balks 'Home to Die' Flight of Solon

Low-hanging clouds over New Brunswick today delayed fulfillment of a Canadian Parliament member's last wish to be flown from Boston to his home in Prince Edward Island before death overtakes him.

The Hon. Alfred E. MacLean made the request from his bed in Baker Memorial of the Massachusetts General Hospital, where he has failed to rally despite treatment since last August for a malignant disease.

The tip may be made by train if the patient's condition warrants the slower means of travel, his family indicated on learning that a chartered plane had been grounded at Moncton, N. B., by bad weather.

His wife, who had accompanied him with another relative on the long journey from Prince Edward Island, has been in constant attendance at his bedside.

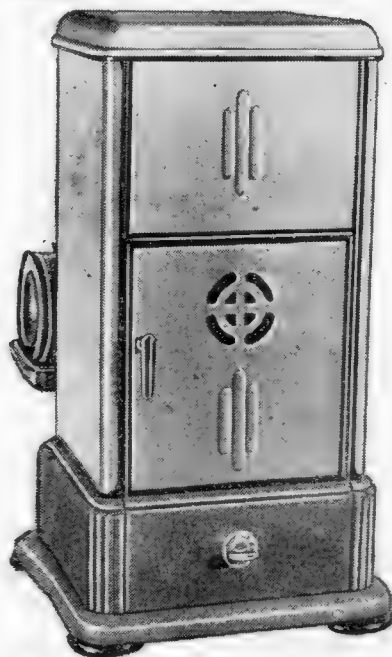

Convinced that his life could not be saved, the courageous old parliamentarian told his wife of his longing for his native island. He did not want to die in a strange land, he said, and asked that he be taken back to the scene and the people he knows.

Tobin-Curley Word Duel Stirs Boston Political Circles

Boston political circles were buzzing today with discussion of former Governor James M. Curley's political attack on Mayor Tobin made during an impromptu speech during a halt in the East Boston Columbus Day parade—and the mayor's biting reply.

The word battle came as the upshot of a row over inviting the former Governor to public celebrations.

Although not invited to participate in the parade or Wednesday night's dinner of the East Boston parade committee, the former Governor, Mrs. Curley and William H. Barker, clerk of the East Boston district court occupied an automobile in the Veterans of Foreign Wars division of the parade yesterday.

Mayor Tobin headed the parade, witnessed by between 250,000 and 400,000 persons, and did not know of the Curley speech until later.

The attack was launched when the Curley car was stopped at Saratoga and Putnam sts., after Barker had undertaken to entertain the crowd with songs during the lull.

ATTACK ON TOBIN

Then he introduced Mr. Curley as "the friend of the people" and "the poor man's friend," to the cheering throng, and the former governor seized the opportunity to play Mayor Tobin for closing the East Boston Relief station.

"The man who would close a hospital must be branded as a public enemy," Curley declared. "There is no economy in the closing of hospitals. A delay of five minutes in reaching a hospital often spells the difference between life and death."

Told of the Curley speech Mayor Tobin flashed back, accusing the former governor of impropriety.

"It is unfortunate that Curley has reverted to form by holding up the parade to make a street corner speech, entirely out of order on such an occasion and insulting to the intelligence of the people of East Boston," said the mayor.

"It is too bad to besmirch the day with dirty politics. He's the last man in the world who should make such remarks, because his action from 1930 through 1933 more than anything else brought about the financial condition that took the city almost to the verge of default.

"Two superior court judges have rendered decisions that he owes the city far more than enough to operate the relief station for a year. I suggest to him that he promptly pay up."

Bob Cuniff 25 Years in Office

Twenty-five years ago to the minute, at 9 o'clock on an autumn morning Robert E. Cuniff sat down for the first time in front of his desk as a public official.

Today, at the same hour, he appeared at the office of the Boston Finance Commission, of which he is secretary. His desk was covered with flowers, and as he paused in surprise his fellow workers gathered about him, laughing and cheering. Then he remembered—it was his silver anniversary.

"It may be Friday, the thirteenth," he said, "but it's a happy day for me."

He was presented with a handsome traveling bag.

Frank S. Hanson, head of the financing department of Pennsylvania state college.

After graduating from the business school she attended here, she obtained a secretarial position according to investigators.

They believed she gave up her job, some time ago, in fear that her secret romance, and its unhappy outcome, would otherwise be discovered.

Dr. Cornelius J. O'Leary, assistant medical examiner, officially pronounced death due to illegal surgery.

According to police, search of the hotel room was made after employees had become alarmed by moans and other disturbances there.

'DOPE' SENDS 5 TO PRISON

"Those who handle dope handle dynamite."

With that declaration from the bench, U. S. Judge Francis J. W. Laid today sentenced five men to prison terms ranging from six months to the Penitentiary for 18 months on federal indictments.

Heading a group from Alvin Karpis, McManis and the fact that a guilty plea was entered, Judge Paul sent the five men, six months to the Eastern State Penitentiary.

Others and the sentences given them are:

James G. Smith, 41, of Chicago, Ill., 18 months; Charles A. Cassano, of Bedford, N. Y., 18 months; Joseph Lachin, of Bedford, 18 months; and Arnold J. F. H., 18 months; and N. Abington, 18 months.

Congress in Need Of New Columbus

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN

Special to Boston Evening American

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13—Christopher Columbus, we are told, once demonstrated to a circle of gaping boobies how to stand an egg on end.

President Roosevelt said the other day that what this world needs right now is another Columbus, and he was right.

The Congress is badly in need of some simple philosopher who can show them how to make an egg stand up.

The nation of Senator Johnson of Colorado, proposing a three-day recess of the Senate as a peace gesture, was necessitated by the fact that "Dear Alben" Barkley, the so-called Democratic "leader" of the Senate, is definitely of the type of mind that doesn't know how to do a simple egg trick.

The crisis was so acute one could have cut it with a butter knife.

The destiny of mankind hung upon the issue of a negotiated peace or the blasting desolation of war.

The United States, at a moment when Europe hovered on the verge of an all-time that might result in the saving of 10,000,000 human lives, was about to be committed to a legislative action strictly unneutral—the repeal of the arms embargo—and designed to aid one set of belligerents as against the other—at a moment when the neutrality of America was never more essential to the preservation of world tranquility.

Yet Mr. Barkley stupidly, as one must believe, permitted the provocative debate to continue.

It was not so important, from the world point of view, or from the strictly American point of view, that the Senate should take a three-day recess, as Mr. Johnson proposed.

What was essential was that the Senate—and it well might have remained quietly and unobtrusively in session should lay about the neutrality resolution for a few cooling-off days, and devote itself to other business.

3 Dead, Many Injured In Holiday Crashes

More than a dozen persons lay seriously injured in hospital today and three victims were dead as the result of Christmas Day highway mishaps.

The major crash occurred on the Boston-Boston road, when a sedan and a truck collided, killing the driver, Miss E. J. Arthur, 29, of Arthur St., Boston, Ruth Lewis, 25, of Boston, suffered fractures of her arm and another passenger, Miss W. M. of Boston, received a fractured skull.

W. M. of Boston, Mrs. Mary A. Casey, 70, of Lake St., North, was killed when struck by a car as she was waiting for a bus near Western College.

Richard J. Morgan, 24, of M. and Mrs. Keene's, J. M. of Fall River, was fatally injured in an automobile which was struck into a parking space, near a Fall River.

Five employees of the Bus Company narrowly escaped death when one of the vehicles, carrying passengers, swerved and struck a drunken man on the highway and stopped at a Fall River.

The bus knocked down a man and ran over him, killing him. The man was taken to the hospital and died.

Harriet, the passenger, was taken to the hospital and died.

FIGHTS FOR LIFE IN SUICIDE TRY

WORCESTER, Oct. 13—His dream of a happy home with his wife and a few months' rest by the persistent spectre of unemployment, a man, 22, today was battling for life which police say he tried to end.

The youthful bridegroom, son of Mrs. N. Brown, a local store proprietor, was found in his father's home in West Boylston St. with a knife wound on his left side.

At Worcester City Hospital physicians said he had a 50-50 chance to live.

Only six months married, young Brown had sought work as far as Boston, Mass., but repeated efforts failed and he returned home disappointed and depressed, police said.

Annual B. U. Dinner For Trustees Oct. 19

Trustees and members of the faculty of Boston University and their wives will be the guests of the university at dinner, Thursday, Oct. 19, when the annual meeting of the trustees will be held.

President Marsh of the university established the custom when he became head of the university 14 years ago.

The dinner, according to a university announcement, will be the first social event to be held in the Charles Hayden Memorial auditorium. The business meeting of the trustees will be held at 4 p. m., followed by a reception in the college of business administration.

Annual reports will be made public following the dinner, scheduled for 6:30 p. m.

Chemical Society Holds Symposium

SOUTH HAVLEY, Oct. 13—More than 100 members of the Connecticut Valley section of the American Chemical Society will attend a symposium sponsored by the Mount Holyoke department of chemistry on the college grounds tomorrow. Industrial chemists from nearby cities and scientists from six neighboring colleges have accepted invitations.

Mother, Daughter Classmates

BRATTLEBORO, Vt., Oct. 13—Her best school chum is her mother!

Such is the unique situation at Brattleboro High School, where Mrs. Ruth Deedy and her daughter, Betty, 15, are both members of the freshman class.

Mrs. Deedy, whose husband is a railroad telegrapher, moved here with the family from Norwich, Ct., last summer. She plans to become a hospital dietitian or home economist.

Sealed Verdict In Rep. Rogers Suit

ALFRED, Me., Oct. 13—A sealed verdict was to be returned today by a jury deliberating the $750,000 damage suit filed by Massachusetts Representative Edith Rogers against the Biddeford and Saco Coal Company.

Mrs. Rogers, lover in a similar case tried a year ago, has contended that the buildings of the company extend over the boundaries of her property at Bay View, Saco.

Thieves 'Lead' a Dog's Life

John Snow of Allston was convinced today that his little Fido is altogether too friendly with strangers to be a watchdog.

Fido submitted tamely when thieves took his bone and smashed glass in a jewelry store in Brattle sq., Cambridge, and then let them take several watches and jewelry from the window.

Then, when the thieves stole John Snow's car, Fido accompanied them. He was found standing guard over the car after the thieves wrecked and abandoned it in an excavation in Inman sq., Cambridge.

THE SEA RAIDERS

Dramatic Story of War's Lane
Walves of the Sea

By FRED PERKINS

IN THE WORLD WAR year of 1915, Death took no Sabbath holidays in mine-sown, submarine-haunted, raider-infested North Sea waters.

Even in the gray sky above the gray ocean, peril also lurked, for German, French and English fighting planes and bombers hovered watchfully there, like giant birds of prey.

Yet when dawn began to break through the North Sea haze on the Sunday morning of Aug. 8, 1915, officers not on watch aboard the British auxiliary scouting vessel Ramsey were comfortably pajama-clad and snugly tucked between sheets.

Of the breed that would traditionally dress for dinner in an African jungle, with attacking head hunters lurking in the darkness, these debonair young gentlemen of the Royal Naval Reserve saw no reason not to avail themselves of the decencies of civilization. Mines or no mines, U-boats or no U-boats, bombs or no bombs.

They were therefore in a state of embarrassing deshabille when the first burst of machine-gun fire from the German sea raider Meteor ripped and tore across the Ramsey's bridge and a fatally wounded bo'n, with his dying breath, managed to pipe the call: "All hands to quarters!"

All hands were desperately needed on the Ramsey's blood-smear deck.

The opening blast of bullets from the enemy raider had killed the British scout vessel's captain, Lieut. Com. Raby, R. N. R., and the navigating officers and quartermaster with him on the bridge.

Now the Meteor's two four-inch guns had been swung into position on their disappearing swivels and they were alternately lashing the Ramsey with deadly sprays of shrapnel and shattering her hull and superstructure with close range shell-fire.

The Ramsey's own gun crews died at their posts before they could level their sights or pull a lanyard.

The utter surprise of her attack won the battle for the Meteor as soon as it was begun.

THE raider's disguise as a dirty and slovenly Russian freighter had been perfect to the last detail. It had deceived the Ramsey's commander so completely that he had not even trained a gun, but had merely signalled with his whistle for the supposed cargo boat to halt.

It was not until the Ramsey's cutter with a boarding crew was halfway to the Meteor that the latter revealed herself as an armed and formidable enemy.

In an instant, the raider's deck crew had thrown off their shabby oilskins and had appeared neat and seamanlike in trim blue-jacket uniforms.

What had looked like a galley on the Meteor's deck bristled suddenly with machine guns. The two four-inch cannons raised their shining black lengths snakily from their places of concealment.

The fierceness of the fire the sea raider directed against the Ramsey from the very first would have sufficed to sink the unprepared and masterless British vessel within a very few moments.

But the Meteor was wasting not a clock-tick of time. She would be hunted soon like a mad dog by swarming British cruisers, and she knew it!

So even as her machine guns and shellfire were flipping the Ramsey to pieces, she launched a deadlier weapon still—a 22-inch torpedo!

It couldn't miss or be avoided at such point blank range, and

A Torpedo Hits ... And a Huge Liner Plunges to the Bottom ... A Cargo of the Living Dead it crashed with devastating explosive force just under the Ramsey's waterline, somewhat aft of amidships.

With her whole stern torn away, the Ramsey immediately began to fill and sink like a punctured biscuit tin.

Four minutes from the time the Meteor had first brought her machine guns into action, the North Sea's waters closed over the Ramsey's unrepentant colors, as the riddled vessel took her final plunge.

It spoke well for British seamanship and navy training that any lifeboats at all were success-speech, apologizing for the ruthlessness of his attack upon the Ramsey.

"Yet so it must be in war," he continued. "And we, too, in our turn, may any day give our lives for the Fatherland."

The British officers were assigned comfortable quarters in cabins on the Meteor's deck. Enlisted men from the Ramsey were given a mattress and blanket each and were confined in the raider's hold.

Before dismissing the prisoners, however, the German commander asked if they would like to join in a brief service of requiem for showing the hull of a Norwegian cargo boat found loaded with timber intended for the British army as trench and dugout material.

The Norwegian was sunk after her crew had been brought aboard the German raider and sent below to keep the Ramsey's crew company.

It was not to be many hours, however, before the Meteor should have her role abruptly reversed by fate and become the hunted instead of the hunter.

The German raider's highly talented command just before the time she encountered the Ramsey were promptly discovered by British trawler sweeps. General warning was sent out that the area was to be avoided until cleared.

Yet in spite of this, H.M.S. Lynx, a destroyer, came blundering along into Moray Firth next morning and was blown up, with loss of her commanding officer and all hands except three junior officers and 21 men.

Meantime, the whole British North Sea patrol had been ordered to block retreat of the as-yet-undiscovered mine-layer and hunt her down without mercy.

Admiral Jellicoe, himself, directed the pursuit. He and others of the British naval high command had by no means forgotten that it was the German raider Berlin which had laid the mine which sank the huge Second Squadron battleship Audacious off the coast of Ireland in October 1914.

The cruisers hunting the Meteor sighted their prey the Monday afternoon of Aug. 11, 1915. Captain von Knorr of the sea raider had been warned however. A German observation plane had seen the British warships and a roving U-boat had intercepted their wireless signals.

Von Knorr knew at once his jig was up. So he planted bombs in the Meteor's hold and hustled his own crew and the British and Norwegian prisoners aboard a passing Danish fishing vessel.

This fisherman might have escaped the notice of the approaching British cruiser squadron, but for presence of mind and courage of Acting Lieut. Atkins, late of the Ramsey.

One of his fellow survivors was a signalman. Atkins ordered him to wig-wag from the Danish vessel's deck an appeal in navy code for aid.

The reckless deed was accomplished under the very noses of Capt. von Knorr's armed and disgruntled German blue-jackets. One of the British cruisers signalled back, directing the Danish fisherman to proceed south-west and wait to be overhauled.

Suspicious of a trap, the officers were slow in following. They waited, first, to watch the Meteor blow up and sink, as the time bombs in her hold exploded.

The delay enabled Capt. von Knorr and his sea raider to escape being taken. They transferred the British and Norwegian prisoners to still another fishing boat, a Norwegian. Then in the Danish fisherman, the Germans reached their own coast, escorted by U-boat and airplane convoy.

The British destroyer squadron, at its leisure, picked up Acting Lieut. Atkins and his handful of Ramsey survivors. On one North Sea Sabbath, at least, Death's busy-awing scythe had passed them by!

Sea Raiding Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse ... Reconverted Liner fully launched from the Ramsey. One of the few that did reach the water overturned, and drowned or crushed its occupants. But in all, four officers and 39 men survived to be picked up by rescuers from the Meteor.

TAKEN aboard the German raider as prisoners, the 43 Britishers received courteous and hospitable treatment.

Capt. Von Knorr, the Meteor's commanding officer, first directed that his erstwhile foes be given dry, warm clothing, a round of frog and medical treatment if they needed it.

Then he invited them back on deck and made a tactful little their dead comrades.

When his offer had been gratefully accepted, he ordered a lecture brought on deck and draped with the British Union Jack.

Then, he, himself, and all his own officers not on duty stood punctiliously at attention while Acting Lieut. P. S. Atkins, R. N. R., senior surviving officer of the Ramsey, read an appropriate prayer.

Eventually the prisoners were escorted to their quarters, given cigars and cigarettes, and left to the much needed rest. Their sleep that night, however, was again disturbed by gunfire.

This time it was the Meteor had been to lay a field of mines across the mouth of Foray Firth in northeast Scotland.

At Cronanry, the British naval base at the head of Foray Firth, was Admiral Jellicoe of the Grand Fleet, aboard the flagship Iron Duke.

Protective patrol of the whole adjacent sea area was intensive, as was to be expected. But hazy weather favored the Meteor, and she actually succeeded in depositing 374 of her deadly high explosive eggs. She was escaping when the Ramsey halted her to the Ramsey's colors.

The name the German raider had left behind her, however,

Let Stalin Keep Blood-Stained Hands Off Finland!

STALIN IS treading on dangerous ground when he attacks Finland.

More hostile sentiment will be aroused in this America of ours by an injury or an affront to Finland than by any other evil deed of Stalin, although these evil deeds are legion and include many insults and injuries to these United States.

Finland is the most upright and honest nation in Europe.

She is the one nation that has recently paid its duly contracted debts to us.

She is the one nation whose word of honor is worth a centime or a farthing.

She is the one nation that the United States has reason to respect.

Moreover, these Scandinavian states—Finland, Sweden, Norway and Denmark—are the only REAL DEMOCRACIES in Europe, if we except Switzerland.

They are anti-Communist, anti-Asiatic, anti-Totalitarian.

SCANDINAVIAN COUNTRIES have contributed more than their full share to the world's cultural treasure chest, to its educational systems, to its desire for progress through peace.

We here in America boast of our Scandinavian stock. It is solid, loyal, progressive, honorable, liberty loving.

Finland in its efforts for cultural progress is the very opposite of all that Soviet Russia stands for.

Finland expresses the spirit of the West.

Finland stands for Occidental progress.

Finland represents liberty, enlightenment, tolerance, peace and good-will to all men.

The slave of Russian Czarism from 1809 to 1919, she emerged from her slavery hating and refusing the yoke of that continuation of Czarism in a hundredfold worse degree—Russian Bolshevism.

Finland has one of the greatest free educational systems in the world.

Her political philosophy is co-operative, not compulsive. She is a free nation of law and order.

She has by her wisdom outridden the world depression. She was the FIRST country to do so.

She has produced great writers, great poets, great composers, wise and cool headed statesmen, whose arts and wisdom have flowed into the stream of all civilized people.

THE REPUBLIC OF FINLAND has commanded the respect of all the world for twenty years—all the world with the single exception of Red Russia.

No act of aggression in recent times—in modern history—has less justification to bolster it than this contemplated rape of the Republic of Finland by Stalin, who now threatens all of Europe, as Genghis Khan and Tamerlane once did.

It is well that the Scandinavian nations are aroused to protect themselves against the Red Russian invasion.

It would be well if the nations of Central Europe were equally aroused and equally united to preserve peace and to safeguard civilization.

It is suicidal folly for the European nations to make devastating war on each other and let Stalin build his Communist empire on their ruins.

Peace for European nations—salvation for European civilization—sympathy and encouragement for Finland in her noble struggle for liberty.

That is a program which America can whole-heartedly endorse.

Mr. Roosevelt has spoken with the voice of America in his word of warning to Russia.

FRIDAY THE 13TH, traditional day of ill luck, inspires numerous newspaper stories and causes thousands of readers to ask why this date should be considered more unfortunate than other dates.

The generally accepted answer is that Christ was crucified on Friday and ever since, Christians have associated the day with misfortune.

Because there were thirteen at the Saviour's last supper, this number has been similarly regarded with fear.

Consequently, through the ages, various persons have reasoned that an unlucky day and an unlucky number must be doubly unlucky.

Actually, history provides little evidence to support this assumption. On April 13, 1598, religious freedom was extended to the French Huguenots. Texas proclaimed her independence on November 13, 1835. Scores of other fortunate "13's" might be cited.

The Candle

..The candle throws its feeble ray . . . at best only a little way . . . Yet from a window, shining bright . . . it serves the homeward path to light.

A puff of wind, the merest breath . . . condemns the candle-light to death . . . and yet, before the flame expires . . . it might create a million fires.

Thus even lives unknown to fame . . . can hand on an immortal flame.

Human Side of News

By EDWIN C. HILL

SPOKESMEN for the Toy Manufacturers of the U. S. A., meeting in New York, report a lessening demand for war toys, but an increased demand for "national defense equipment."

One knows what they mean, and of course the distinction is sound and sensible, but the whole thing would be clearer if they would tell who is doing the demanding. Does the enlightened juvenile write Santa Claus that he wants for Christmas only such weapons as anti-aircraft guns, which obviously cannot be used for offensive war?

Or is it the parent who is disparaging militarism, and drawing the line across the hearty rug, with wanton aggression on one side and sound patriotism on the other?

THE TROUBLE seems to be that to children war is drama and good dramaturgy necessarily needs protagonists of both good and evil. If you buy the lot a nice fortress and provide no attacking army, he'll probably recruit one from beans or buttons, with or without modern offensive equipment, and the casualty list will probably be up to that of any of the fully equipped battles of Toyland.

The toymakers seem to suggest that, with Christmas in the offing, it is the spontaneous and untutored demands of the children which are guiding them in their offerings, but it is also indicated

CHRISTMAS IS COMING—HERE'S THE PROOF!
Toymakers Prepared to Supply Santa Claus' Needs that the mood of the country is to keep out of war, and that, presumably, is an adult sentiment.

In 1914 more than half our toys were imported, the bulk of these imports being from Germany. It is sad and confusing to think that the Germans have always been both the great toy-makers and the great war-makers.

During the World War, a friend of mine bootlegged in a Nuremberg doll for his daughter which might have been sculptured by Luca Della Robbia. It was exquisitely quaint and beautiful and one could not believe that the artist who made it could be dragged into a savage war of conquest.

I felt the same way when I saw a revival of "The Toymaker of Nuremberg" a few years ago.

The toymakers this year are emphasizing "purpose reproductions of American industries, science and homelife, as well as exact miniatures all types of transportation."

That's fine as far as it goes. But in the adult world we seek William James' "more equivalent of war," and in the juvenile world something that might be called the drama equivalent of war.

THE KIDS just must, by drama. Will they get it in steel shovels, electronic laboratories and four-octave electric organs?

Perhaps when a real civilization reveals the essential drama and survival value of these marvels. Until then they probably will go for the war toys.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13—I worked late again last night and have come to the conclusion that there is something in the air in Washington which obliges one to burn the midnight oil.

I had a small luncheon for Madame Peter, whose husband has retired as the Swiss Minister. She has so many friends here that it is happiness to know that her children, living in this country, will always keep her here for part of the year.

I had an opportunity to talk to Dr. Reeves this morning, who is carrying on the work of the Youth Commission so ably begun by Dr. Rainey. They have done a most wonderful piece of research work and I am most anxious to know what conclusions they will come to as a result of their findings.

Their suggestions for the use of their facts which they have discovered will be valuable to every community.

I FEEL that one of the most important things to work on today is the problem of jobs for youth. This is the basis of all the other problems which they face. The problems of work for older people and of old age pensions for those who are beyond their working years, are important problems but they do not press in on us in quite the same way, because youth brings to our labor market every year a new crop which will become either usefully productive, or remain an idle burden.

MRS. ROOSEVELT
Praises Massachusetts Girl

Every community should make this problem a community problem, for habits are important when you are young and one can so easily become a worker or a loafer according to the circumstances of environment and opportunity. I hope that before long there will be formed some central group which will co-ordinate all the kindly feelings which are at present scattered throughout the country and which are taking shape in a variety of organizations that do a variety of things here for the rest of the world. This multiplicity of small organizations means tremendous overhead and, frequently, an overlapping of work.

Until some central organization is established where all the work can be co-ordinated, the groups must continue to flourish by themselves.

TO MY DESK come daily reports of new ideas. They vary from relief of Chinese and Spanish civilians, to mothers' anti-war clubs. Finally, a day or so ago there came a letter about a children's club called "The Goodwill Club," which features a Christmas shoe box to be sent to soldiers in all armies and to contain a great variety of articles—more than I ever dreamt one shoe box could hold!

This particular activity is being started by a young lady in Massachusetts. Though one may wonder what will be done with these shoe boxes, one can only applaud the spirit which prompts young people to want to do something for others not as benefactors as themselves.

WHY WHALEN GETS SPECIAL HONOR

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK, Oct. 13—A few days before he sailed for Europe, Grover Whalen rode up Fifth avenue, preceded by a motorcycle escort. Among the automobiles which were stopped to clear a path for Whalen's car was that of Mayor LaGuardia. "Fiorello," asked the Mayor's companion, "I thought you put a stop to this business of motorcycle escorts for every notable?" "For every one except Whalen," LaGuardia confided. "I'm building him up to run against me."

PAUL MUNI, rehearsing in Maxwell Anderson's play, "Key Largo," asked Guthrie McClintic, the director, whether he thought the play would be a hit. "If things get tough," McClintic assured him, "I'll change the title to 'Scarface Key Largo'." Muni is rehearsing at the Ethel Barrymore Theater, near the Strand. When he was swamped by autograph hunters Thursday he pointed to the Strand Theater and said: "You don't want me. You want Ann Sheridan."

LUIS RAINER sailed for America yesterday. . . Pietro Di Donato, the bricklayer who wrote "Christ in Concrete," was signed this week to write a sequel, using the same characters. . . Betty Compton Walker and John Jacob Loeb have completed their second song, "When You Dance By." . . Alec Woolcott is taking no chances concerning pictures. Woolcott has hired his own flattering photographer, Richard Wood, who accompanies him everywhere, taking the photos Alec wants.

A HOLLYWOOD SCENARIST, who once wrote a flop play with George S. Kaufman, has resented Kaufman's subsequent success. . . "Every year since then," Kaufman stated, "he goes looking for strange idols, at which to pray that I don't get a hit." "Is he still doing it?" Kaufman was asked. . . "Yes," replied the co-author of last season's unsuccessful "The Fabulous Invalid," and co-producer of the unsuccessful "Sing Out the News," "and last year he found an idol that worked."

THROUGHOUT his entire career Governor Harry Chandler of Kentucky has dreamed of the day when he would go to Washington as U. S. Senator. . . That day came Wednesday—and Chandler missed the train. He had to hire a special train from Louisville to Washington. . . Olsen and Johnson were at his side during the induction ceremonies—and attracted much attention from the other Senators. . . Chandler turned to Senator Lucas and said: "Forget these two men and pay attention to me. I'm the one who's being inducted."

PUBLIC AIRING of the deep dislike entertained by Mayor Tobin and former Governor Curley for each other was not unexpected by camp-followers of the two former fast friends. . . The bitterness of the mutual attacks made in the East Boston Columbus Day celebration is a curtain-raiser to a real show. . . Practical politics is in the background. . . On the ballot at the coming election will be a referendum sponsored by Mayor Tobin and his allies. . . The electorate will decide, by this referendum, whether a Mayor of Boston may succeed himself. . . Under the present charter, he may not.

WHEN FORMER GOVERNOR CURLEY was Mayor of Boston in his second term, there was talk of projecting the same referendum for public decision. . . But it didn't come off. . . The present mayor was successful in getting it on the ballot, and it has been believed generally in political circles that the issue, with the blessing of a "Yes" vote in its wording, would be decided with a sweeping majority making it possible for a Boston mayor to serve successive terms. . . The "Boston home rule bill" was not calculated to inspire much opposition. . . But it will get a battle, the column hears, and former Governor Curley will be a leader of the opposition. . . When Curley opened fire on Tobin in East Boston you were hearing the first blast of the campaign. . . The Curley interest doesn't indicate necessarily that he will be a candidate for mayor. . . It indicates that he is interested in thwarting if possible, the possible perpetuation of his one-time friend and supporter, Maurice J. Tobin, in the office of mayor.

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY: With Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson losing caste with the Administration to the extent that Administration journalistic mouthpieces are admitting that he is in the White House "doghouse," there is happiness in the vicinity of Fitchburg. . . Fitchburg is the bailiwick of former Senator Marcus Coolidge and former Mayor of Fitchburg Robert (Long Bob) Greenwood. . . The first is father-in-law, and Long Bob is brother-in-law of Secretary of War Harry Woodring. . . Greenwood is a fair sort of country politician, and Capitol wisecracks would be surprised how effective he has been in adding to the discomfort of his brother-in-law's assistant—and mortal foe.

GEORGE ABBOTT: the producer, made it three nights in a row at the Mayfair, but Katharine Cornell, after unprecedented pair of appearances in a nightclub, returned to her solitude last night. . . The talented Katharine told Joe Frankland, the reporter, that she had never visited a nightclub. . . Joe deleted the line from his interview in deference to the play-by-play account of Kit's caperings (very mild) at the Mayfair printed here Wednesday and yesterday. . . The lady, Joe, was spoofing. . . We can get you fifty witnesses. . . Eddie Cantor's "Mad Russian" Bert Gordon passed the time between shows with his friend, Max Michaels, manager of the Globe Theater, now devoted to bullfighting. . . Then he enlivened things at the Coconut Grove.

Hollywood Today

HOWARD HUGHES IN FILMS AGAIN

By Louella O. Parsons

Howard Hughes

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 13—The war has folded Howard Hughes' wings, so far as his air flights in foreign lands are concerned, so he will now re-enter the picture business, of which he was such a vital part a few years ago. Interestingly enough, the boy millionaire, who spent a fortune producing pictures, actually made money with them. His first in the new venture is an original story, bought four years ago, and now being prepared by Frank Moss, a young Hollywood writer, for January production. It's a drama with a foreign locale.

Howard discovered Jean Harlow and introduced her in "Hell's Angels," the grand-daddy of all talking air epics. He gave Paul Muni his first big chance in "Scarface," and now he is looking for a new girl and boy. He denies that he will remake "Hell's Angels," which is still being shown in small theaters (or that he is considering an air cavalcade). He hopes to make entertainment on the order of "Two Arabian Knights," "The Racket," "Scarface," and between you and me there isn't a film company who won't bid for his releases.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD: The biggest basket of flowers sent to Merle Oberon came from Sammie Goldwyn, which gives the lie to rumors of a feud; Lili whispered that pretty Eileen Jordan, Scarlett O'Hara contestant, has a swell chance of stepping into Andrea Leeds' shoes in the Gary Cooper movie, "The Outlaw"; Charles Laughton's ear infection is more serious than the studio is admitting. He is threatened with mastoid; the Wayne Morris, looking very happy, arm in arm at the "Roaring Twenties" preview.

BETTY GRABLE and Artie Shaw night-clubbing and looking so happy; Tom Garagany, who went to England with Doug Fairbanks in 1933 and remained there, gets back today. He'll see a lot of changes in the old town; one of Betty Davis' friends says that her eyebrows and hair have grown in since she shaved them for "Elizabeth and Essex"; Gilbert Roland and Constance Bennett, who have been battling, made up just before she took the plane for New York. He was at the airport to see her off.

ALICE FAYE is waiting for a day off from "Little Old New York" so she can use her insurance money to buy a new wardrobe to replace the one lost by fire; just heard that Louise Brooks is teaching dancing, cute little Ann Rutherford dividing her time between Rand Brooks and Chuck Isaacs at the Victor Hugo; these girls; everyone can relax now. Joan Crawford and Clark Gable meet before the camera in "Not Too Notorious," set to open Monday. Melvyn Douglas will play the second male lead.

DAILY STORY

'I Found Love'

EVER SINCE I was old enough to have boy friends, dates were always the means to an end—having fun.

My life seemed remarkably clear and orderly when I was 19. I would never change. I would go on as I was going, year after year, never altering my romantic program.

ONE NIGHT, Jack, an easy-going, quiet and serious boy, vowed that I was the "one and only girl in the world." I laughed.

Deeply hurt, Jack jumped to his feet and stared down upon me with a bitterness that caused me to cringe.

"Some day, Rena," he said, "you'll meet someone who'll make you pay in tears and heartaches for your unfaithfulness. I hope you'll realize then the misery you have created for others."

I was sufficiently recovered from the shock next evening to find a new boy friend. He happened to be a young businessman who not only took me to theaters, golf clubs and social affairs but also eventually gave me a position in his office.

As time passed I learned really to love.

Night and day I thought of him, wanted to be near him every moment, feared for his safety when he travelled alone, and furiously hated his wife.

He never suggested marriage. Though I prayed with all the strength of body and soul for the happy hour when he would ask me to be truly his, he failed to speak the hoped-for words.

FINALLY, unable to suffer more, I made a womanly mistake.

"John," I said, "we cannot go on. At least, I cannot go on. I love you—love you more than myself. You have become my life. We belong to each other. We cannot deny ourselves the happiness that marriage will bring." And to my vast amazement, John laughed.

"Many stenographers fall in love with the boss," he grinned. "But they all get over it. The girl who had your job two years ago did. And so will you. It happens that I love my wife and children."

"SOME DAY, Rena—you'll meet someone who'll make you pay in tears and heartaches for your unfaithfulness."

Two years ago, poor, hurt, jilted Jack said that.

And now: "It happens that I love my wife and children."

Can anyone say that the Age of Prophecy does not extend into the Twentieth Century?

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

QUEER HOW some off phase, some stray bit of experience, will stick in your mind for years, be woven into the very warp and woof of your life.

I'm thinking of four words which I heard—and puzzled over—as a small girl yawning my way through a Sunday morning sermon. "THE VALLEY OF VISION." Of the rest of the sermon I haven't the slightest memory.

"The Valley of Vision." But Visions didn't come in valleys, said I to myself. Maybe I was only ten but even a ten-year-old knew about that. All the fairy tales told you. Visions didn't come in dark, pokey ole valleys. Visions came on high, shiny places... magic mountain peaks... after you'd climbed all the forbidden trails and killed the dragons and found the Secret Treasure.

ARE YOU SMILING, too? Thinking back to the long-ago when you were a Little Tyke and lived in a Never-Never world of marvel and enchantment.

And up, there are revelations to that smile. For you still believe—and have always believed—that visions came on mountain peaks—in the shining, triumphant moments of life—not in the dark, pokey ole valleys.

Those shiny mountain peaks—we all believe in them. And most of us spend our lives watching for them... feeling that we'll find Our Chance up there, waiting for us, some day.

AND ALL THE TIME CHANCES ARE, OUR VISIONS LIE RIGHT BESIDE US IN THE DARKNESS AND THE SADNESS OF SOME NARROW VALLEY... IN THE COMMONPLACE ENVIRONMENT AND DRUDGERY WE SO DESPISE!

NO, I'm not saying that a great life must necessarily be a hard life or a poor or a sad life. I don't think God ever intended that souls should hatch in poverty and pain exclusively. But having spent most of my own life in mighty limited scenery, I've had the chance to notice a very strange phenomenon. Namely—The very best visions DO come in the valleys!

When it comes to pomp and pleasure, pride and power, the glittering peaks have it all over the lowlands as exclusive resorts.

But if you want to catch the great and enduring glimpses of life—if you wish to see the stern face of Truth and the brave face of Peace and the gentle face of Loving Understanding, then there's only ONE PLACE to find them, and that's IN THE SHADOWS.

HAND BILL BAN UP TO U. S. COURT

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 (AP)—Litigation intended to test the constitutionality of municipal ordinances prohibiting the distribution of handbills on the streets came before the Supreme Court today for argument.

Ordinances passed by Los Angeles, Milwaukee and Worcester, Mass., were challenged on the ground that they violated freedom of speech and of the press. The cities said they passed the legislation to prevent littering of streets.

A similar attack was made on an ordinance in New York City, which prohibited the canvassing of homes to sell booklets without first obtaining a permit from the chief of police.

The four ordinances were sustained by state courts. Among persons convicted of violating the legislation who appealed to the Supreme Court were Pauline Thompson of Worcester, Mass.

The Supreme Court recently held unconstitutional a Griffin, Ga., ordinance which banned the distribution of handbills without a permit from the city manager.

Final decisions in the four cases are expected in a few weeks.

NLRB Condemned By CIO Convention

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 13 (AP)—Delegates to the CIO international convention rose in a body here to shout endorsement of resolutions which condemned the National Labor Relations Board.

"This convention commends to all CIO affiliates a most sparing and considerate use of the Wagner Act in the future," said one resolution.

The board and its administrative policies were flayed by Phillip Murray, head of the steel workers' organizing committee, and Van A. Rittner, official of the packing house workers' organizing committee.

The resolutions were introduced after the convention had adopted a 1940 political course without reference to a possible third term for President Roosevelt.

The Labor Relations Board was dealt with in two resolutions, one ultimately adopted, one stating that the CIO "condemns without qualification" the "board" which undermines basic purposes of the Wagner Act.

CHARGES ANTAGONISM

The resolution asserted the board's policies "have resulted in the displacement of unbiased personnel in favor of personnel antagonistic to the CIO."

"The CIO brands the adoption of such policies and such displacements of personnel as an unwarranted and unworthy retreat" by the board "under fire from the reactionary officials of the AFL and the most powerful and dangerous corporate employers of the land," it stated.

Murray recited recent board decisions in the steel and auto industries in which, he said, craft unions of the A. F. of L. apparently was favored over CIO industrial unions.

ATTACKS LEISERSON

He attacked "an individual named Billy Leiserson," the President's new appointee to the labor board, who, Murray said, "when he was appointed gave credence to widespread reports that he was 'going to do a job to the CIO'."

Await Truce in Old Labor Row

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 13 (AP)

The American Federation of Labor faced with a federal court order enjoining its asserted authority to regulate inter-union jurisdictional troubles, looked to a special conciliation committee today to find a settlement for the long and bitter boundary war between the Brewery Workers and Teamsters Unions.

Instead of carrying out an executive council recommendation to suspend the BMU for obtaining a court order, the federation's 59th convention adopted a proposal to set a special committee to settle the dispute which Thomas L. Hughes of the teamsters said dated back to 1902.

Daniel J. Tobin, teamsters president, leading the fight against the BWU, viewed as a blow at the federation's basic power the ruling to transfer beer truck drivers from the BWU to the Teamsters' Union.

Urge Milk Price Raise for Farmers

Two new proposals for the handling of milk in the Fall River area were to be discussed at a public hearing by the Division of Marketing and Marketing Agreements of the United States Department of Agriculture today at Wapunga Grange hall, Westport.

One proposal is for an increase in the price of milk paid to farmers due to rising feed costs and the long summer drought.

FARMER, DRIVEN MAD BY 'GHOSTS,' DIES

FULTON, Mo., Oct. 13 (AP)—Raymond Soukoup, 26-year-old farmer, went into his field to cut corn stalks at night. Excessive heat had made day-time labor too strenuous. He reached the end of his field, which borders a cemetery. Then, Soukoup related: Several white-garbed figures popped up. Two, moaning weirdly, leaped toward him. Soukoup was too frightened to run. His parents discovered him, still hysterical, hours later.

That was Sept. 22. Soukoup died yesterday at a state hospital. A physician who treated the young farmer said death was due to maniacal exhaustion resulting from an unusually severe mental disturbance.

DISCOVERS ATOM 'GHOSTS'

By G. B. LAL

International News Service Science Editor

NEW YORK, Oct. 13 (INS)—Helium atom "ghosts" have been discovered in the newly opened wonderland of liquid helium, according to Prof. J. D. Cockcroft's report received today from the royal institution of Great Britain.

Extreme cold condenses the atoms, jamming them together in such a way that the individual vibrations of the atoms, their separate energy levels, are all hopelessly mixed up.

Thus films of liquid helium are formed in which these zero energy helium atoms are in large numbers. Liquid helium now behaves as no other known liquid is known to do. Liquid helium when cooled to 4.2 degrees or more below zero Fahrenheit, assuming the form "helium 2," shows the new properties.

ties unlike those of known substances.

When heat is applied at the top, the liquid helium 2 rises up like a fountain. On the way liquid helium 2 cools, since heat from above pushes them down.

Dr. Cockcroft reports another startling effect:

"When an empty test-tube is dipped into a flash of liquid helium 2, the test-tube slowly fills, as though there were a hole in the bottom."

These remarkable properties are explained by Dr. Cockcroft as the result of the existence of helium-ghost atoms, zero energy atoms in the thin liquid film that clings to the outside of the test-tubes.

Liquid helium 2 rushes through thin pipes 5000 times faster than in open pipes.

It can be changed into a permanent solid, thus making a new material that cannot be used for large liquid helium 2 liquid. Scientists looking forward to applications of these discoveries in many fields, Dr. Cockcroft suggests.

RULE BIRD DEATH AS ACCIDENT

Death of Ragnar E. Bird, 23, Harvard junior whose body was found near railroad tracks in Syracuse, N. Y., was pronounced accidental today by the coroner in that city.

Bird, who lived at Elliot House, left college Wednesday on a hitchhiking trip to Chicago to attend the Harvard-Chicago football game. Railroad authorities said he had been the victim of a robbery in Manhattan, N. Y., and he paid a $2 fine for riding a freight train, promising the conductor would steal no more rides.

His home is in Hatfield but at his court arraignment he gave as his address the house listed as the home of Katherine Hepburn's parents in Bloomfield av. The Harvard dean says he's his address at Garden st.

Bird was found at the entrance of an unheated tunnel a block away, and was believed either to have been riding atop a freight train and to have been swept off by the bridge, or to have been hit by a train as he trudged along the right of way.

Hollywood Exhibit Shown by Harvard

Correspondence showing that the Hays office in Hollywood forbade the producers of "Tom Sawyer" to expose the young boys in a swimming hole unless they donned trunks, is part of a special movie display at Robinson Hall, Harvard University, today.

The exhibit is sponsored by the Harvard Graduate School of Design and demonstrated the step-by-step progress made in filming Milk and Twain's masterpiece. Included are the actual properties of the scenes: a hand-painted rubber shovel, Injun Joe's wig and letters showing the routine of script-writing and of talent-hunting.

Mother of Sorrows Novena Begins Today

A new series in the famous Mother of Sorrows Perpetual Novena will be inaugurated at the Holy Cross Cathedral today.

Because this Novena will end on Friday, December 8th, the Feast of the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin—this series of nine Fridays will be known as the Immaculate Conception Novena of the Sorrowful Mother.

Four Novena services are held each Friday at the Cathedral at 3:30, 5:30, 6:30 and 8 o'clock. Many business people who are making the Cathedral Novena attend the 7:30 Novena Mass on their way to work and attend Novena devotions at 5:30 or 6:30 as they return from work.

The new famous Cathedral Shrine of the Mother of Sorrows has become nationally known, and among recent visitors have been those from Canada, Seattle, Wash., and Alaska.

Catholics and non-Catholics alike are welcome to attend the Cathedral Novena services.

Plan 'Nose-Prints' for Dogs

The desperados of dogdom may soon shrink, as do their counterparts in the American underworld, from the terror of fingerprints.

Except that the canines will be forced to undergo "nose-printing," which is said to prove as accurate and individual as the copies of human fingerprints.

This was indicated today by Robert F. Selar, president of the Animal Rescue League, who predicted the practice will become nationwide as a means of identifying lost or stolen dogs.

MILITARY POMP and ceremony with a liberal intersprinkling of gold braid and full dress uniforms seldom seen in these parts, marked the opening of the 110th Cavalry Horse Show last evening... The show officially opened when Governor Saltonstall, with Mrs. Saltonstall and their debutante niece, Sally Russell, arrived with the governor's aides and were escorted into Colonel Brown's box to the strains of martial music...

Mrs. Saltonstall wore a necklace of twisted ropes of pearls with her black gown and burgundy velvet wrap, and Sally chose a bouffant taffeta gown of deep rose...

Just off the train from Hot Springs where she played in the finals in a big tennis tournament, Kay Winthrop hustled into her riding togs and put her hunters over the jumps in several classes... Dottie Preston who went south with her, was among the crowd of railbirds which also included Louisa and Julie Barbour and Lucy Cochran, three of the North Shore's most expert younger riders... Mrs. Thomas Lanman was escorted by her youngsters, and also in the crowd of fans were Dorothy Storer, Mrs. James Cunningham Gray with her daughter, Katharine, and Mr. and Mrs. William Coburn who are giving a luncheon for the judges today...

THAT MAN IS HERE AGAIN... Cupid the Archer has shot his bolt... Now Dorothy MacAusland is building Castles in the Air, or dreaming of Castles in Spain... At least she would rather have a Castle than the finest of modern apartments and you'll understand why tomorrow when her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Russell MacAusland of Marlborough st. give a tea and make an important announcement...

ELIZABETH JENNY'S debut next Friday, which will really be three parties rolled into one (a tea, followed by dinner and dancing) will also be a housewarming for her new modern powder room and boudoir...

The rooms are part of the new ell which the Charles S. Jennys have added to their lovely brick house on Warren st., Brookline, to provide more room for "Tish's" entertaining... She is one of the most popular and vivacious of the season's deb's...

THE LONG-LEGGED STORK has a date at the home of Harold Baptiste and his bride, the former Louisa Beane of Cambridge... Many a socialite has mastered the steps of the rumba and other modern dances from Mr. Baptiste, who teaches ballroom dancing... Louisa was a popular deb of a few seasons ago.

Dr. Eddy's Question Box

WHAT CAUSES CONSTIPATION?

DOES VITAMIN A HELP TO FIGHT COLDS?

By DR. WALTER H. EDDY
Director of Good Housekeeping Bureau

"Would you kindly advise me the right kind of food to eat, and exercise to take, to overcome constipation?" A. M.

First, find out the cause of your constipation. The only way to do this is to get a diagnosis by a qualified physician. Such a diagnosis will tell you what dietary deficiency you have, if that is the cause, and also will prevent your attempting by dietary measures to correct a condition due to some other factor if the error is not in the diet.

In other words, it is just plain common sense first to locate the cause before seeking a remedy; guesswork in such situations is dangerous.

It has been shown that constipation is frequently due to lack of the coarser elements of the diet; to lack of vitamin B; and also to sedentary occupation. Sometimes it is due merely to eating too much. In general, foods that supply vitamin B, such as whole cereals, fruits and vegetables, will also provide roughage, which is helpful.

Use of Electrolysis
"Is it possible for hairs to be removed from the corners of the mouth and upper lip? If so, does it require the services of a skin specialist?" N. A. P.

Medical authorities maintain that the only satisfactory method of destroying hairs and being sure that they will not return is by the use of the electric needle. This should be done by an expert operator. Most trustworthy beauty salons provide satisfactory operators for this service. Many dermatologists are also equipped to give it.

Vitamin A Important to Cold Resistance

"My druggist claims it is unnecessary to buy fish oils with added vitamin A. He claims the vitamin is necessary only when a bone-builder is desired." Mrs. J. H.

All fish oils contain both vitamin A and vitamin D. Both cod-liver oils and halibut-liver oils contain much more vitamin A proportionately than vitamin D; hence the tendency to reinforce them with vitamin D, which is vitamin D in solution.

VITAMIN D is the anti-rachitic vitamin, because its absence results in rickets. It is obtained by free exposure to sunlight and by the inclusion in the diet of cod liver oil.

It is definitely shown that vitamin A helps to keep the respiratory membranes (lining of throat and nose) more resistant to attack by bacteria. This is the basis for increasing the vitamin-A content of the diet in order to maintain such resistance.

The main function of vitamin D is to control the use of lime when over it is needed in the body. There is no definitely proved evidence that it helps to build resistance to diseased organisms, so your druggist's friend is probably correct in his viewpoint.

SALMON AND CORN STEW

(Tested by Good Housekeeping Institute)

INGREDIENTS
2 strips bacon, dried fine
1 peeled medium onion, sliced
2 c. sliced pared potatoes
2 c. boiling water
2 tsp. salt
1½ c. canned whole-grain or cooked fresh corn
2 c. thickened or canned salmon
2 c. bottled milk or 1 c. evaporated milk and 1 c. water

METHOD OF PREPARATION

Saute the bacon and the onion until the bacon is crisp. Add the potatoes and boiling water, and cook for 15 min. or until the potatoes are tender. Add the salt, corn, salmon, and milk, and heat thoroughly. Serves 6. To serve 2 or 3 make half this recipe.

SERVE for lunch with baking-powder biscuits, honey, and a canned-pear salad.

DANCE TONIGHT FOR NEW TECH BOYS

One of the outstanding social events of early autumn is the Technological Catholic Club's annual "Acquaintance Dance" for the new men at M. I. T., slated for this evening in Walker Memorial Building at Technology.

Joseph J. Case of Dorchester is in charge of arrangements, assisted by Paul Jensen of Wollaston, Edward Murphy of Belmont, Wylie Kirkpatrick of Medford, John Mulvan of Amesbury, and a group of 15 girls from Greater Boston colleges.

Hot Soups Are Nutritious

By MARTHA LEE

When the cool autumn evenings set in, there is nothing so inviting as a hot soup. Variation in soups, as in all other foods, is a delightful surprise and fish soups provide the homemaker with an opportunity of giving a new zest to the family's appetite.

Pattern

Dutch Dress Has Own Cape

By MARIAN MARTIN

Being "in Dutch" is fun when it means wearing this Marian Martin dress and cape, Pattern 9221. It's colorful and gay as the land of tulips and windmills that inspired its style.

Pattern 9221 may be ordered only in girls' sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14.

Size 8, entire ensemble, requires 2½ yards 54-inch fabric and ¼ yard contrast; dress, 2½ yards 35-inch fabric and ¼ yard contrast.

Send fifteen cents in coins for this Marian Martin pattern. Let Marian Martin's new Winter Pattern Book show you the easy way to home dressmaking and a distinctive, individual wardrobe. Book fifteen cents. Pattern fifteen cents. Book and pattern together, twenty-five cents.

Send your order to Boston Evening American, Pattern Department, 232 W. 18th st., New York, N. Y.

Clam chowder has long been a favorite in the soup department. Not as well known, but equally delicious are many other fish soups. They are good tasting, nutritious, low priced and as simple to make as all other soups.

WHOLE FISH USED

From the economical point of view, fish soups are ideal. Full use of the fish is possible. The home cook can use the skin, bones, fin bits, tails and even heads. In this way the full benefit of the entire fish is obtained and it is the waste fish which the purchaser buys.

Here are some choice fish soup recipes:

CREAM OF FISH SOUP

Cut 1 pound fish into pieces. Add 1 quart cold water, 4 peppercorns and bunch of soup greens. Bring to boil; simmer 40 minutes, strain. Add water to stock to make 1 quart. Melt 3 tbsp. butter, add 3 tbsp. flour. When boiling, stir in soup stock. Bring to boiling point. Add 1 cup green peas, 2 cups asparagus cut into small lengths, 1 cup diced potato and seasoning to taste. When cooked, add 1 pint hot milk. Serve.

RUSSIAN FISH SOUP

Cut 2 pounds fish into pieces. Cook with 6 cups water, 1 bunch soup greens, 1 large onion and 2 bay leaves. Remove fish when cooked. When vegetables are cooked, strain stock. Add 1 green pepper diced, 6 mushrooms chopped, and ½ cups tomato juice. Brown 2 tbsp. butter and 2 tbsp. flour and add to soup. Add 1-3 of fish, diced. Season to taste.

ENGLISH FISH SOUP

Cook 1 pound fish trimmings in 1 quart water with 1 each: leek, carrot, onion. Bring to boil; skim. Simmer until ingredients are tender enough to run through strainer. Season with 1 clove, ½ tsp. mace and pepper and salt to taste. Add 3 tbsp. flour mixed with a little cold water or milk. Boil up. Add 2 or more cups of any cooked vegetables desired. When heated, add 2 cups hot milk, 3 tbsp. butter, 1 cup of tomato puree, may be added with the vegetables.

FISH HEAD SOUP

Cook 3 pounds fish heads in 3 quarts of water with 1 carrot, 1 or 2 stalks celery, 2 sprigs parsley and 2 onions, until cooked. Strain. Sauté 1 large onion and 1 pound cabbage until beginning to brown. Add to soup stock with edible meat from fish heads and carrot diced. Add 4 tbsp. tomato paste and 2 bay leaves, 2 cooked potatoes diced, salt and pepper to taste. Simmer few minutes. Thicken with 2 tbsp. flour mixed with a little cold water. Boil up.

SEA SOUP

Cut 2 cups of scallops very fine. Sprinkle with 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Cover and let stand 20 minutes. Add 1 cup of water. Slowly bring to boiling point. Add 1 quart hot milk, 2 tablespoons butter and salt and pepper to taste. Cook below boiling point for 8 minutes. May be strained before serving.

NEW ENGLAND FISH CHOWDER

Cook head, bones, skin and trimmings of 3 pound fish in water to cover for 20 minutes. Strain fish stock and add water to make 4 cups liquid. Cut meat of fish into cubes and roll in seasoned flour. Sauté ½ cup diced fat salt pork until brown, and remove pork scraps from pan. Brown in fat 2 minced onions. Dice 3 potatoes. Mix all together in a heavy saucepan, then cover and simmer without stirring until cooked. Add 2 cups hot milk, 3 tbsp. butter and salt and pepper to taste. Bring to a boil and serve at once. If thicker chowder is desired, add 4 to 6 crumbled pilot crackers, 5 minutes before the chowder is cooked.

Smart Set Fashions

Fine Furs, Fine Feathers

OUR FAVORITE recipe for fall and winter chic has to do with a fur hat—combine a muff, and pair the two with a cloth coat, and you'll definitely look the part of a fashionable! Perhaps you'll want, to start with, this so-smart Persian pillbox with a long, long snood.

It's a marvelous buy (the fur is fine, beautifully curled) for $15. And for the fine feather that's going to make a fine bird of you... here's an unusual eagle feather on a trig felt (Londonaire, exclusively in one Boston shop) which catches the spirit of all the pretty girls that have gone to all the big games in uncountable autumns... it's only $3.98. Wool jersey is a fashion star in the ascendant... so we applaud this very chic snooded pillbox, which comes in any number of shades, and sells for the wee sum of $1.98.

For shopping information on these unusual new fall hats, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LiBerty 4000, week days until 5:30, or write.

She's Looking for Trouble

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I've been married for five years to a man just a little bit older than I am. I'm 24. We have a baby girl two years old, who is very adorable, and we're both crazy about her. I'm very much in love with my husband, and if anything should happen to him, I just couldn't live. But he's so different from husbands of other girls in my crowd.

When we get together at each other's homes, these other husbands spoon occasionally, and kiss their wives, while mine never even thinks of petting in public.

Another thing is he doesn't romp with the baby as other fathers do. Sometimes I feel like leaving.

He tells me his love is in his heart and that it isn't necessary to wear it on his sleeve. Do you think I'm unfair?

LOVING WIFE.

If this gentleman were my husband I should prefer his reserve to the public petting you tell me goes on among your friends.

If you will forgive me for saying so, I think you're looking for trouble.

You Can Be Beautiful

Foundation for 'Dewy Look'

By ARLINE GOULD

FOUND — the perfection foundation for the "dewy look" that's getting all the beauty editors in the country all agog!

This is actually a make-up base that gives the skin color, tone and sparkle... and it's waterproof... so that if you need a quick clean-up in the middle of the day, and can't stop for ministrations with cream, lotion and cleansing tissues... just splash cold water on your face!

You'll come up with a gleaming, clean face, but with make-up intact. Just add a dusting of powder, touch up the corners and curves of your mouth, and you're ready to be off again!

In form, this "beauty-tone" make-up base is a cream base paste, and it's applied with your moistened fingertips. There are several shades.

You're guaranteed that this one has nothing in common with pore-stuffing foundations... because one of its principal ingredients is the very same thing used in a companion cream which is famous for the way it draws blackheads out of the skin!

When using it, after cleansing the skin, touch a small amount of "beauty-tone" to the chin, nose, forehead, both cheeks and throat, with moistened fingertips. Dilute the cream paste, spreading it very thinly all over the face and throat. Dry the hands thoroughly. Now blend and smooth the foundation until it seems to become part of the skin. Then on with a dazzling make-up!

To learn about this extraordinary waterproof foundation for make-up, phone Arline Gould, LiBerty 4000, week-days until 5:30, or write, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

ARCHDUKE OTTO SEES AUSTRIA'S REVIVAL

Revolt Will Crush Hitler, He Predicts

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER

International News Service Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Oct. 13 (INS)—The rue Austria is on the side of the Allies and Austrian opposition to Hitler has grown so powerfully since the outbreak of war that now has become certain that Austria will break away from the third Reich by the time the war ends.

Nazi fear of an Austrian revolt has become so great that all Austrians have been removed from Hitler's body-guard regiments and all Austrian pilots have been withdrawn from the German army air corps.

Archduke Otto

Higher officials of the German Nazi party and Gestapo in Austria are shipping their collections of Austrian art objects and other valuables back to the Reich.

These and other forthright statements were made to me today by Archduke Otto von Habsburg, the young man who has been distinguished of late by being the object of Hitler's special personal and public hatred and abuse.

Franz-Josef Otto von Habsburg, legitimate heir to the crown of Austro-Hungary, does not believe that Hitler's six-year-old Third Reich will last the "hundred years" which Dr. Goebbels once boasted.

"His Majesty Otto," as his followers call him, is convinced to the contrary that sooner than outsiders think, Hitler's Gauleiter, his Gestapo agents, and all the equipment of Nazi rule in Austria will be swept away by a revolt of torrential violence.

And, Otto thinks, at the conclusion of this war the people of the Danube basin will unite in an economic and political confederation which will block permanently Germany's ambitions to rule central and southeastern Europe.

HITLER A PRUSSIAN
"Hitler, despite his Austrian origin, is essentially Prussian," said Otto as we sat in a modest hotel back-sitting room, which in plainness contrasted like black with white with the magnificence of the Habsburgs' regal residences throughout the vast empire his family dominated for three quarters of a millennium.

"And Prussia is the evil spirit of Germany," he went on. "Prussians are not Germans. They are Germanized Slavs."

"Now the worst has happened that anyone could have imagined. The Prussians joined Russia, and Hitler has cast aside his mask and revealed himself for what he is, namely, arch-Bolshevik."

"For a long time some people in Austria thought we were German and welcomed the idea of Anschluss, but these last 19 months of purgatory taught the Austrians what nationalism differences there are between Hitler's Nazi Germany and our own Austria."

HITLER FORCES 'AFRAID'
"Today the vast majority of my people feel this so strongly that Hitler's forces have become afraid."

"When the war broke out Hitler tried to obtain from the former Austrian leaders and from the clergy declarations supporting his war of aggression against Poland. He failed."

"He demanded that Catholic bishops sign a proclamation urging the Austrians to fight. They refused, and the second Sunday after the war began, priests throughout Austria preached without naming Hitler, but on the subject of anti-Christ, robbery, and murder."

"The Gestapo arrested several hundred of them and Gauleiter Hauer of the Tyrol threatened to shut all Catholic churches and expel all priests from the Tyrol if they continued to oppose the war."

"I have positive knowledge that beginning with Joseph Buerckel (Nazi commissioner for Austria) all high Nazis and all the Gestapo agents in Austria—who are all German—have since the start of the war shipped great quantities of their loot back to Germany, although they had established homes in Austria and obviously intended to live there indefinitely, living off the land."

AUSTRIANS REPLACED

"Then there is a fact which I know personally to be true: That Hitler replaced with Reich Germans all Austrians who were serving with anti-aircraft units defending his famous roost at Berchtesgaden."

"Mind you, he has there two full regiments of anti-aircraft men solely for the defense of his person."

"Furthermore, since the first day of war, when one Austrian pilot in the German air force was ordered to bomb a Polish town, but instead landed and went over to the Poles, all Austrian pilots have been withdrawn from the German air force."

"When they told Hitler about the Austrian deserter he flew into one of his rages and ordered every Austrian pilot dismissed."

"We received reports from Austria about the refusal of several Austrian units in the German army to fight the Poles. The Viennese regiment formerly called the Deutschmeister and the Tyrolean regiment, Alpenjäger, refused to fire at Polish troops at the beginning of the war, and they were withdrawn from the line and sent through Czechoslovakia."

"They reached Czechoslovakia at the same moment the Czechs broke out in revolt about the second week in September. The Germans tried to use Austrian regiments against the revolting Czechs, but the Austrians again refused to fire.

SPIRIT OF REBELLION

"Aside from our physical force, which we still possess, we Austrians oppose all our moral forces against this modern barbarity, which, personified by the union of Hitlerism and Stalinism, wants to destroy all religion and all Christianity."

"Vienna will yet be again, as it once was against the ancient Turks, the rampart of Christianity and civilization against Anti-Christ."

"Hitler is indeed that—Anti-Christ and the enemy of humanity."

Young Otto's eyes glowed. I left him feeling that Hitler had underestimated the power of religion to move men's hearts in defense of the church.

Calls Reply To Hitler, 'Inadequate'

LONDON, Oct. 13 (AP)—The council of action for peace and reconstruction headed by David Lloyd George, Britain's World War Prime Minister, today characterized Prime Minister Chamberlain's rebut of Nazi peace overtures as "quite inadequate."

Action by the council, an organization of dissident Liberals, came on the heels of widespread newspaper and private comment praising the firm stand against Adolf Hitler taken by Chamberlain.

Informed Liberals said they believed the speech had finally convinced Germany that France and Britain were determined to fight to the bitter end.

After a private meeting, which was originally scheduled to be open to reporters the council announced:

"The council of action, while welcoming the fact that the Prime Minister's statement does not finally close the door for peace negotiations, regards the statement as quite inadequate, alike as a statement of British war aims and failing to contain any reference to the far-reaching consequences of the intervention of Soviet Russia."

HITLER LOOKS TO U. S. AS SOLE PEACE HOPE

do not and can not understand," one spokesman said. "His speech was filled with insults of the grossest nature. It was the talk of a small, revengeful man, led by the nose by a war clique."

At the same time an official statement was issued excoriating Chamberlain and placing responsibility for war upon his shoulders.

"The speech was an unheard-of insult to Germany," this statement said. "It displayed an unbelievable impudence against the Reich and its politics."

"Chamberlain has spurned Hitler's hand. It is obvious that he has no desire to understand or consider the Fuehrer's responsible proposals."

"The German people know from the experience of Versailles to what destructive measures the British can go. The German people know therefore the road that must be followed to frustrate the will of their enemies."

Hitler's conviction that the United States might throw its weight on the scales in favor of peace came from one of Hitler's right-hand men, Dr. Otto Dietrich, German press chief, in a conversation with foreign correspondents.

Dietrich gave out the indication that Germany now is looking to Washington for a peace move shortly after Hitler, angered by Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's rejection of his peace overtures, decided that if circumstances remain as they stand at present, the Reich will wage total war against Britain and France.

Hitler, after reading Chamberlain's speech, was quoted as remarking:

"It is a plain rejection. There is nothing I can do about it."

U. S. CAN STOP WAR

Dietrich charged that England would not have plunged into war if she had not felt sure of United States support.

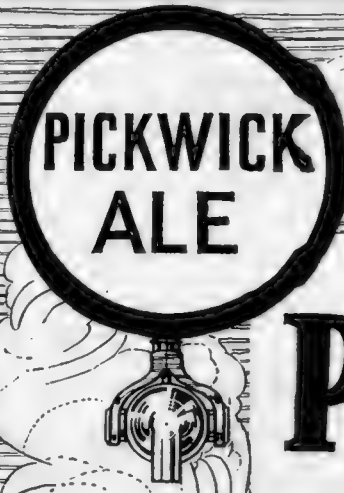

He indicated clearly that Hitler believes that if a major neutral—the United States—would serve no time upon England that America under no circumstances would allow herself to participate now or in future disputes in the European War. Europe would find immediate peace.

Hitler's decision for a total war was reached following a three-hour session in which he and his most trusted government and military leaders concluded that the peace offensive had failed and that the war must continue.

U. S. Army to Buy 8000 Motor Vehicles

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 (AP)—The War Department is drafting orders for about 8000 motor trucks and other vehicles, official sources reported today, largely to put the army's new "streamlined" divisions on wheels.

Bids already being asked of manufacturers represent prospective purchases, totaling about $15,000,000, of light combat and reconnaissance cars, as well as trucks of several sizes.

PICKWICK

Pickwick owes much to the good gifts of the American farm.

PRISONED in your smiling glass is the sturdiness of yellow harvest fields shining in the autumn sun—acres on acres, the source alike of cakes and ale. It is generous use of golden grain that yields the full round body of Pickwick Ale.

Last year over 14,550,000 pounds of Barley Malt and Hops were used in the brewing of Pickwick Ale.

'HONEYMOON IN BALI' HIT AT MET

Bright Dialogue Marks Film

Career-Girl Madeleine Carroll gets no support whatever from her fellow careerists, Virginia Van Upp, Grace Sartwell Mason and Katharine Brush, in her efforts to avoid matrimony and Fred MacMurray in "Honeymoon in Bali."

They give MacMurray all the right answers and the final syllables in this heady, spontaneous if ineptly titled comedy-drama now unrelenting on the Metropolitan screen. (Miss C.'s late divorce action mixed the original title, "Are Husbands Necessary?")

More than that, they give him a gill-size stouge, in the person of cute, four-year-old Carolyn Lee, who asks embarrassing questions at the wrong time. Helen Broderick, Miss Carroll's tart-tongued author-companion, is also flagrantly pro-MacMurray.

Head of a smart Fifth ave. shop, Madeleine Carroll is determined not to permit romance to interfere with her career. Comes the man from Bali and only Miss C. is blind to the fact that it is to be a 100 per cent victory for MacMurray, the m. from B. Meanwhile, these two charming people play at cross purposes most engagingly. They are easily the most decorative and witty customers of the smart nightclub they frequent. The dialogue throughout is the brightest and occasionally the naughtiest of the year's comedy output.

You'll be amazed at MacMurray's casual cataloging of the duties of four of his five Balinese hand-maidens and by Akim Tamiroff's matchmaking window - washer whose precarious calling has given him an interesting philosophy of life. Osa Massen's Danish charm will please you, as will Allen Jones' single operative number. Another different touch is Bennie Bartlett's messenger boy doing his "Happy Birthday" sing-song stunt with pained reluctance.

VIRGINIA GREY and Charles Morris lend heart interest to "Thunder Afloat," held over for a second week at Loew's State and Orpheum.

This latter episode is a little reminder from MacMurray, who has gone home to Bali to marry the boss' daughter, because Miss C. has run out on him to Hawaii.

Between this and that, Madeleine finds herself undergoing a change of heart in re-impregnable career-women. She takes the first boat to Bali, only to discover she is too late for anything but the MacMurray-Massen wedding ceremonies. But MacMurray knows where his heart is, leaves the church unmarried, and the finale finds him and Madeleine in a till-death-do-us-part clinch.

There is skilled direction by Edward H. Griffith and generously lavish production by ex-Bostonian, Jeff Lazarus.

"Pride of the Bluegrass," with Edith Fellows and James McCallion, is the co-feature. P. D.

Eddie Cantor Packs RKO Boston With A-1 Stage Show

Copley's Stock Wins at Opening

Alan Gray Holmes' new stock company got off to a good start at the Copley Theater last night with its opening performance of "Night Must Fall," the Emlyn Williams melodrama which enjoyed some success on London and Broadway stages.

In the role of the baby-faced killer, played by the author in the New York production, Eiford Gage carries conviction. His Danny is excellent characterization, standing up creditably in contrast to Williams' performance of some years ago.

Not so convincing is Katherine Cosgriff's Mrs. Bramson, the suggestive old lady who meets her doom at the hands of the officious Danny. Remembering Dame Whitely's performance in the first Miss Cosgriff's inadequacy in the first scenes, as the action progresses Miss Cosgriff gains in power and in the third act when she finds herself in terrified loneliness she proves effective.

Joan Croydon, as the old lady's companion who gradually finds herself responding to Danny's gauche charm, gives a competent performance. Capable, too, are Frank Daly, Helen Walker, Volia Binkley, Harry Hanlon and Alice Wiley in supporting roles.

Gala Midnight Show at Howard

Old Howard's big midnight show tonight, starting at 11:30, has for its handsome attraction, Louise Stewart, star of the week's burlesque revue, "Cherry Blossoms." Assisting her are Peggy St. Clair, Grace Gordon, Betty Lynn, George Murray and others.

Grand Film on Twin Bills

One of the season's better pictures is Gordon Hillman's "Here I Am a Stranger," now on view at the Paramount and Fenway theatres.

It is the story of a young wife who, taking their infant son, leaves her charming but irresponsible husband because she realizes he will never give the child the advantages she desires for him.

The boy grows older in the luxurious surroundings provided by his mother's successful second marriage. In college, his own father's alma mater, he learns enough about his father from an eccentric college professor to determine to know him.

The encounter is mutually satisfactory. The father likes his son. The son recognizes in his scrupulous parent a man he can be proud of. The mother, with the best intent, would keep them apart.

There is an automobile accident, resulting in the death of a woman. The son's best friend, a youth without money or influence, is innocently involved although it is the raddish brother of the same father who is responsible.

Richard Dix as the irresponsible father turns in a persuasive performance. Gladys George, as the wife who would give her son a better future, is entirely plausible. Roland Young's eccentric professor is a portrayal he can be proud of. Katherine Aldrich and Brenda Joyce are an interesting contrast as the two girls in dimpled Richard George's heart. P. D.

Comedy Aplenty In His Offering

By PEGGY DOYLE

Eddie Cantor, who says that applause is an actor's Vitamin B, stored up enough for another year in Hollywood at yesterday's RKO Boston opening show.

The greatest showman of them all faced the biggest RKO Boston audience since his sensationaly successful engagement of three years ago. With every seat taken and a couple thousand waiting in line at the box office, it looked yesterday as though he'll break his own house record.

The Cantor company is as nutty as a fruit-cake in several departments. In instance, we give you the Mad Russian and the heckling Mr. Guffy, who are just about as sane as a piece of Marx brother.

Eddie's particular pride is school girl Leni Lynn, little girl with a big soprano voice and a career, her patron thinks, that may outdistance that of his other protegee, Deanna Durbin. Leni sang an aria from "La Traviata" as easily as she sang the popular ditty, "Over the Rainbow."

The Stunt Morgan Dancers killed as the "World's Greatest Acrobatic Duo" did some amazingly fluid stepping. Eddie admitted they were good but asserted it would really be something if the three Adonises tossed around a Kate Smith instead of the fly-weight kid dancer.

Tapster Doris Dupont, who has danced at the Coconut Grove, opened the program with some attention-getting stepping.

A pair of grand piano, and a pair of grand piano-players to make them come alive added tone and what Eddie called to his program. Another zesty note was stunning Joyce Hunter, who, looking down at Eddie from her considerable altitude, almost made him forget he is old enough to be a grand father before today's last show, maybe. The prospective papa is young Jimmie McHugh, Boston boy, who married one of Eddie's five daughters.

Undoubtedly the best part of the show is Eddie himself—but singing. And singing such imperishable favorites as "Margarita" and "If You Knew Susie," or in the briefest of rompers and Shirley Temple make up, paraphrasing "The Good Ship Lollipop," "Let Them Keep It Over There," as Eddie sings it, looks to be our new national anthem.

"Two Bright Boys," meaning Jackie Cooper and Freddie Bartholomew, is the brightly entertaining film feature.

Examine this table. It shows that $6.41 monthly repays everything on a $100 loan in 20 months. Or $7.95 per month repays a $100 loan in 12 months. The faster you pay, the less the total cost.

One Price to All

These payments are calculated at Household's rate of 2 1/2% per month which is less than the maximum permitted by the Small Loan Law and are the same to everyone—one price to all. Only borrowers sign no endorser on any loan. No credit inquiries of friends or relatives. To apply, phone, write or visit office.

RENO Rendezvous

by LESLIE FORD

"If anything is disturbing you, you can count on me for help," Colonel Primrose said.

"I'm sure of it," I said. I hope it sounded as smooth and sincere to him as I thought it did. "But after all—you are a policeman, aren't you? And even Sergeant Buck—who is certainly my most devoted admirer—says you'd cheerfully hang your own grandmother. Not that I'm in immediate danger of being hanged, or anyone else I know."

"But, as you know, my niece was engaged to Cromwell—even if she still had a husband—and Mr. Cromwell is dead, and obviously murdered. And Judy's reputation—or what's left of it, I amended to myself—is very dear to me. Which is something that as a policeman you wouldn't understand."

He looked at me with some surprise.

"Except," he said, "that I'm not a policeman—for two very good reasons. The first is that I'm a leading suspect—thanks to the fact that I opened the door of that car."

"I expect you'll be able to clear yourself," I said—very ungraciously considering it was my stupidity that had got me involved. He let it pass, with only a slight sardonic flicker in his eyes.

"The second is equally simple—a fact, it's my sole reason for coming to Reno. I don't expect you to understand it. But I do, however, ask you very earnestly to believe me when I tell you that all in the world I want to do now is save your niece from the consequences—if this happens to be one of them—of her own folly . . . and not get her deeper into something through my folly of yours."

"I wasn't convinced. It was strange, too. A week before I would have gone to him without hesitation, confident of his understanding and compassion. But now he was a policeman after all. I can't deny it as he would, he was still on the side of law and order. I was not. I was on the side of heartbreak, and folly, and despair."

"Let him hang his grandmother, I thought; I would do everything in my power to keep him from helping some politically ambitious district attorney to hang my niece . . . or, under the lethal bell behind the gray walls of the penitentiary in the desert outside Carson City, to breathe cyanide gas until she was as dead as Dexter Cromwell."

But there was no use telling him that.

I said, as brightly as I could, "That's marvelous, then. You've taken a dreadful load off my mind, Colonel. I haven't seen her yet, of course, but I know she'll be horribly upset when she hears what's happened. And there's no telling what she'll do—she's completely undisciplined."

He looked at me for a moment, an odd expression in his eyes.

"Then suppose you give me those hairs," he said, pleasantly.

"Those . . . hairs?" I asked, as blankly as I could.

He got up abruptly, went to the window, and stood there looking out on the bizarre neon-lighted little city. Then he came back.

"Mrs. Latham, I always make a mistake about you," he said quietly. "I find myself thinking of you as an intelligent human being. But whenever we get in a tight spot, you invariably act in the most womanish way."

He was quite angry—and I'd never seen him angry before . . . not at me.

And I was angry too. "Then perhaps you'll be good enough to close the door quietly behind you," I said.

He gave me an amazed glare. "I'm sorry," he said shortly. "I'm staying, until your niece comes."

"In your capacity of old and devoted friend—or your capacity of policeman?" I inquired icily.

He chuckled suddenly. "In both," he said—maddeningly calm again.

I got up and started toward my room.

"Then you won't mind if I go out, will you? I haven't had anything to eat since lunch."

He came a few steps after me. "I'll be delighted to take you to dinner at the River House," he said. "You see, my dear, I don't intend for you to talk to Mrs. Bonner before I've talked to her."

"Then I'll stay here and quietly starve," I said. "You don't know my niece. I do. If we have to have a scene, I prefer to have it here."

"Then I'll order you some food from downstairs."

"You needn't bother," I said. "You're being very foolish, Grace Latham."

"Only womanish, surely?" He gave an annoyed snort, went over to the bar, poured himself a drink and swished the soda in it sharply. Then he turned back to me.

"Look here, Mrs. Latham," he began urgently—almost imploringly. There was a tap at the door.

"Another denoted customer for Judy's bar," I thought. I said "come in."

A white capped-and-aproned maid put her head in, giggled coily and withdrew, obviously thinking she'd interrupted a telenovela . . . although the atmosphere should have been tense enough to indicate its nature.

"Come in!" I said sharply.

Mrs. Latham implores Col. Primrose to be friend instead of policeman. "Oh, no, no!" she cries. "Oh, don't—please don't! I beg you, don't!"

She sidled in, blinking and scared. "I just came to get Mrs. Bonner's laundry," she said. "I do it every week. I usually get it tomorrow, I mean Tuesday, but my mother's at the hospital and I won't be on tomorrow night, so I thought, if it was all right with Mrs. Bonner, I'd get it tonight. But I can make a special trip. . . I don't want to."

"That's all right," I said. I hadn't meant to scare her out of her wits. "I'll get it for you. Where does she keep it?"

"In the hamper in the bathroom ma'am."

"MURDER WEAPON?"

I got up and went into the bathroom. The hamper was one of those combination bath seats and baskets, with a rose-and-gray chenille cover, a large "W" encircled in a wreath on it. I opened it and dipped in to pick up the heap of crumpled silk underthings in it.

And I jerked my hand out instantly—something hard and sharp had struck my finger so that it was simply spurting blood.

"Damn!" I said. It hurt like poison. I reached in again, more carefully this time, and brought up the whole pile of soiled clothes. Then I stopped dead, staring, pressing my body against the rose-enameled washstand to keep from reeling drunkenly to the floor.

Partly covered with Judy's crumpled riding shirt was the miner's candle pick she'd bought in Virginia City the day before. The hook by the bobbed had stuck my finger, but it wasn't that I was staring at it. It was the pointed shaft.

It was covered with brown stuff almost to the hilt. The shirt that it was wrapped in was stained with brown goo. It was blood. I knew that instantly. . . and I knew whose blood it was. In my own hands I was holding the weapon that had slain Dexter Cromwell.

I don't know how long I stared at it. I only know that it seemed an age before I could tear my eyes away from it. In the mirrored wall in front of me I saw my own face, hardly recognizable, so contorted was it with horror and fright . . . and beyond it, behind me in the door, I saw Colonel Primrose, looking at the reflection of the awful thing in my hand.

Then suddenly he was gone. I heard him saying, in a pleasantly matter-of-fact voice, "Mrs. Latham says you can get Mrs. Bonner's clothes on Wednesday. She isn't quite sure what's to go."

And I heard the maid saying, "Thank you—oh, THANK you, sir!" I know he must have tipped her handsomely.

I sank down at the side of the tub, scarcely knowing it when he came back and took the candle holder out of my shaking hands. He wrapped it up in Judy's shirt again.

"Come along, my dear," he said. "Maybe we can talk sense now."

He closed the door behind me, and I sank down on the sofa and closed my eyes. I heard him, close beside me, pick up the phone and say, "Get me Mr. Hogan at the police station."

I sprang to my feet and clutched his arm. "Oh, no, no!" I cried. "Oh, don't—please don't! I beg you, don't!"

He shook his head. Then he said, in an instant, "Hello, Bill. This is Primrose. I'm at the Washoe, Apartment 308. Can you come over? I've got the weapon that killed Cromwell."

JUDY FAINTS

It was just then that I heard a little choked gasp behind us, and turned to see Judy standing there in the door. How long she'd been there I don't know. . . her body braced against the frame, her knuckles white balls outlining the doorknob, her eyes great blank pools set in dark hollows, her mouth a scarlet slash in a putty-colored face. She was staring at the point of the candle holder sticking out of her stained blouse in Colonel Primrose's hands.

Then suddenly, with an inarticulate and awful little cry, she pitched forward in a heap on the floor. Colonel Primrose did not move. He was gazing fixedly at the bright red-gold head on the floor. I started forward, and stopped. In the door, looming massive and grotesque in his musical comedy clothes was Sergeant Buck. Through a fissure in the congealed granite facade I saw a flicker of warmth and compassion as he bent down and picked Judy up as if she were thistledown. I stared, dumbly, white-faced, from him to Colonel Primrose, still standing by the telephone.

Buck's presence there, at that precise moment, told me what I should have noticed when I saw him in the lobby when I came back from the race track. Colonel Primrose was on the job—and he was on it as a policeman, not as a friend.

My hands, as I put a pillow down for Judy's head, were as cold and numb as her own.

And then, abruptly, as if he hadn't already definitely more than reason and sanity could endure, the door directly across the narrow corridor popped open, and out of it, yapping and barking, burst the two dachshunds, and behind them, scrabbling after their leash, came the flaming poll of their mistress.

She came to a full abrupt stop and stared in at us.

"What on earth is going on?" she cried. "John—don't tell me you're being totalitarian!"

She whirled on Col. Primrose—I'd never heard anyone call him John before—and whirled round at me, and threw out her hands.

"My dear, it's the army! They're all alike. . . It's like smallpox, they never get over it—nor is it malaria, you never get over it. Well, it doesn't matter. Just ignore him—ignore him completely, my dear. It's the only way! It really is!"

It was the only way I ever got along with the general, insofar as I did get along!—Now let's all be calm and find out what's the matter!"

I wasn't calm. I was dazed. I simply stared at her. I'd been playing the Indian maiden role and was stunningly gowned in a handsome black lace, high-necked night-dress with a rope of pearls wound around the base of her throat.

She had a lovely figure, and for the first time I saw her eyes, amazingly fine, with a merry hard-bitten light in them. I didn't doubt that she must have been completely irresistible when she was young, or wonder that men couldn't resist her even now.

I saw Sergeant Buck. I saw the ramrod in his back stiffen and his heels involuntarily come together. She looked from one of us to the other, and down at Judy.

"Is it Cromwell?" she asked abruptly. Nobody answered—not that she gave anybody much of a chance.

SHE KNEW!

"It's that row they had last night, John! It positively woke the dead. I positively did!"

Colonel Primrose's black eyes sharpened.

"Dexter Cromwell has been murdered, Mrs. de Courcay," I said sharply. I had to stop her, even if only for a moment, till I could recover my wits again.

Then a strange thing happened. For an instant Mrs. de Courcay's blue eyes met mine like the flick of a tail on a snail, and all her mannered loquacity vanished for a bare pin point of time.

And in that flashing fraction of a moment I saw the truth . . . that she knew—knew ahead of me, knew before she even came into the room—that Dexter Cromwell was dead. But I wouldn't have known it in another second, and nobody else would have.

Will Judy be charged with Dex Cromwell's murder? Has she any defense? Don't miss tomorrow's thrill-packed chapter.

Boston Exchange
Has Birthday

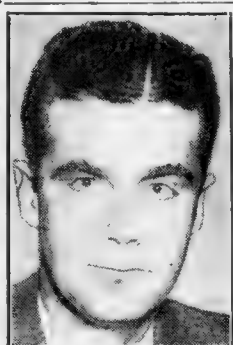

With "Business as Usual" for a motif, the Boston Stock Exchange is observing its 105th anniversary today. Birthdays, like wars and peace scares, are an old story to the patriarch of State st. . . . Whose thoughts are always philosophically of the morrow . . .

THE FOUNDING . . . Fathers paid scant attention to superstitions when they drew plans for organized dealings in securities. . . . They not only established the exchange on Oct. 13, 1834, but began with 13 members. . . . This Friday is the thirteenth, however, finds the membership role number 133. . . . And of these 50 or more are active daily on the trading floor. . . . Dealing in either Boston listed stocks or in the 250 New York listed issues in which the Boston Stock Exchange has trading privileges. . . . Privileges obtained incidentally, because of the big New England interest in the stocks involved. . . .

PRESIDENT . . . Of the Boston Stock Exchange is John E. Yerxa. . . . Who, at 35, is the youngest member ever to have the honor bestowed on him. . . . It is also interesting to note that this is the 88th birthday of Edward W. Gilbert. . . . Who has been a member for 45 years and on the floor every day. . . . Friday, 13th Makes Wall St. Shudder

NEW YORK, Oct. 13 (AP)—As this Friday, the 13th of October, rolls around, the calendar gazers of Wall st. are looking apprehensively over their shoulders.

Of course, the market's pretty good, thanks largely to war orders, and there's not much prospect of peace in Europe, and business is picking up at home, and people are buying stocks again. But this is October.

The calendar gazers have red rings around Oct. 13, Oct. 23 and Oct. 24—three lovely autumn days which included bank crashes, mob scenes, suicides and sudden deaths, destruction of fortunes and savings of millions.

Oct. 24, 1929, was the black Thursday when the whole world trembled.

However, except for sheer size, the catastrophe of Oct. 24 was no worse than that of Oct. 23. This was the black Wednesday of 1907.

TRUST CO. FAILS

On that day the Knickerbocker Trust Company, with stated assets of $70,000,000, passed out $3,000,000 in cash because of withdrawals by other banks and small depositors, then passed out itself because of lack of money to stave off the run.

Mobs rioted around the Knickerbocker's branches. Individuals and corporations were cut off from $500,000,000 on deposit in the big institution.

Before the repercussions of that huge failure had ended, depositors were smashing down doors, policemen at each other on Wall Street itself in weeks of "runs" which cleaned out most of the ready cash in the financial district and crippled the nation's industries for years to come.

'BLACK TUESDAY'

Let's look at Oct. 13. That was the Black Tuesday of 1929.

Wall Street never had seen such prosperous days. The "forty-niners" had been pouring gold into stocks at the rate of more than $50,000,000 a year. In the few years since gold had been discovered in California, $700,000,000 had been invested in railroad securities.

Then the Ohio Life Insurance & Trust Company, with liabilities of five million dollars and doubtful railroad stock as its main assets, suddenly failed in August.

The repercussions shook other financial institutions; then they started to topple.

On October 13 five banks in Greenwich st. alone failed to open. Mobs of depositors stormed at all solvent houses, and before the day was over, 13 more had failed. Stocks crashed in a furor of selling. Thousands were ruined.

The vibrations of that October day were world-wide, and the tremor still continued into the Civil War in the United States, the Franco-Prussian war in Europe and the savage war of the triple alliance in South America.

TWO RAILROADS SPEND 8 MILLION

CHICAGO, Oct. 13 (AP)—The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road was authorized by the federal court today to purchase 10 locomotives and 2000 box cars for $2,500,000. Trustees said 50 per cent of the amount would be financed by an RFC loan.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 13 (AP)—An order for 700 all-steel box cars, estimated to cost $2,000,000, was placed with the Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing Co. here today by the Seaboard Railway. The cars, to be made in the Bessemer, Ala., plant, are for delivery in the first quarter of 1940.

SEARS, ROEBUCK SALES AT PEAK

CHICAGO, Oct. 13 (AP)—Sears, Roebuck and Company today reported sales for the ninth period of its fiscal year, Sept. 11 to Oct. 8, were $62,505,149, the highest for any four weeks in the history of the company.

War Baby Buying Rush Short Lived

NEW YORK, Oct. 13 (AP)—A buying rush for war babies was short-lived in today's stock market and gains running to 2 points of 33 at the get-away were soon reduced or cancelled.

Steels and airplanes were in the forefront of the first hour's upswing, but these dropped the greater part of their advances as the session wore on and activity slackened to a minimum.

Best movers were Bethlehem Steel, Douglas Aircraft, Boeing Youngstown Sheet, duPont, Westinghouse, Allied Chemical, Santa Fe Southern Railway, Western Union, Johns-Manville and International Harvester.

Inclined to hang back were Chrysler, General Motors, Texas Corp., Standard Oil of N. J., Phelps Dodge, Eastman Kodak, American Telephone, International Nickel and Public Service of N. J.

The initial flurry was attributed principally to yesterday's approach of British Prime Minister Chamberlain rejecting Hitler's "last offer" for peace and the subsequent threat of the Fuehrer that a "total war" was about to be launched. Some observers, though, were none too sure the door to an armistice had been closed, and these were quick to cash in on the opening run-up.

Business news, generally, was still cheering, but there were a few flaws to be seen in the picture. With some $9,000 Chrysler workers idle as the result of this company's labor dispute, the motos were indifferent throughout.

Securities in foreign markets were a shade irregular after early firmness. Corporate bonds did better, and industrial commodities exhibited advancing tendencies.

Purchasing at retail for the nation as a whole was placed at 8 to 13 per cent above the comparable period last year, with the Northwest showing increases of 6 to 14 per cent after lagging in previous weeks.

Helpful were last week's freight loading figures disclosing shipments again were the highest in two years at a total of $3,694 cars. A sharp upturn in private building, as estimated by the Engineering News-Record, lifted this week's construction awards 31 per cent over the preceding week and 44 per cent above the same time a year ago.

M. S. Rukeyser Warns Against Paper Profits

Special to Boston Evening

CHICAGO, Oct. 13 (AP)—Merrylee Stanley Rukeyser, economic commentator for the Hearst newspapers and International News Service, in addressing a regional meeting here at the Hotel Stevens under the auspices of the National Association of Manufacturers, warned industrialists against confusing "paper" profits with real gains during war booms and booms.

Forecasting further progress toward re-employment and expansion of business volume in the United States in the coming weeks, Mr. Rukeyser outlined for business a program of "preventive medicine" designed to avert the headaches, insolvencies and mutilations of industry which are the usual aftermath of wars.

He said: "In these times, when reckless political adventures overseas have created extraordinary hazards, prudent men of affairs will seek to minimize their own exposure to risk. In order to keep flexibility, they will forego efforts to achieve the full measure of potential profit, instead they will be eager to set up extraordinary financial reserves against contingencies, so that they will be prepared for any sudden reversal of the economic and political trend."

"In times of sharp advances in commodity prices, it is wise to set up reserve against inventory depreciation. When concerns build plants for special purpose war orders, they should recognize the temporary character of the business, and should endeavor to write off into such emergency capital investments with the utmost despatch. Unless proper abnormal reserves are set up, business men will temporarily inflate their own profit showing at the very time when government is disposed to take a big slice of it through an excess profits tax."

RETAIL SALES GAIN DESPITE BAD WEATHER

NEW YORK, Oct. 13 (AP)—Buying in retail stores made a strong showing this week, despite unusually high temperatures in some parts of the country, Dun & Bradstreet said today in its weekly business survey. Volume matched last week's levels.

"Considering the temporary check to the movement of seasonal goods, totals were quite satisfactory," the agency said.

A new development noted was consumer alertness to price.

"This was said to be most pronounced in silk and woolen goods, although it was evident that advertising appeals and mark-downs were finding exceptionally active consumer response in all staple lines," the credit agency said.

"Resistance was strong to sharp mark-ups on food items and some price-cutting began to make an appearance in larger cities."

Knitwear, furs, and other seasonal items were hardest hit by the mild weather.

Grocery stores reported a decline in business as customers apparently began using up stores accumulated during the heavy but short-lived September "war reserve" buying scramble by excited housewives.

Payable $80,000 each year, Nov. 30, 1941-Nov. 30, 1945, both inclusive

Bidders will name the rate of interest on each loan which rate must be a multiple of 1/4 of 1%. One rate must be made on the Metropolitan Additional Water Loan and one rate must be made on the Flood Protection Loan. Separate bids must be made on each loan and each loan will be awarded separately. In comparing bids preference will be given to the one on each loan providing for the lowest net interest cost to the Commonwealth. Total interest for the duration of the loan from Jan. 1, 1939 on the Metropolitan Additional Water Loan, and from October 30, 1939 on the Flood Protection Loan, less the amount of the premium bid.

Each proposal must be accompanied by a certified check for two per cent (2%) of the amount bid for, to the order of the Treasurer and Receiver-General of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, or a national bank or trust company doing business in this Commonwealth or in the City of New York.

A descriptive circular will be furnished upon request.

Any award by the Treasurer is subject to the approval of the Governor and Council.

The Treasurer reserves the right to reject any or all bids which are not in his opinion advantageous to the interests of the Commonwealth.

WILLIAM E. HURLEY
Treasurer and Receiver-General.

AUSTEN LAKE

How an Expert Picks Saturday's Games

HARVARD-CHICAGO—Richard Cresson Harlow, professor of football and ex-fellow in Oology, takes his migrant redbreasts to Chicago, home of filet mignon, muscle men and Big Bill Thompson.

Oology is the science of robbing bird's nest. A famed naturalist once said that when an oologist prepares his specimens he blows all the science through the hole in the shell. Still the relationship between the Cambridge robin and the Chicago Lake Goose is indicated by the nature of their eggs. Harvard expects to force Ole Chi to lay a nice fresh goose-egg for its Agassiz museum. One strong ballot for the redbreasts (Merula migratori).

Holy Cross-Georgia—Although Georgia, named after King George II of England, was the last of the original 13 states to be settled, the Georgia Bulldogs have seldom been settled by northern varieties. Georgia seceded from the North on Jan. 19, 1861, and has made Yankee potroast its dish ever since. Jaw-Jaw, sometimes called the Honey-suckle Hurricane and sometimes the Marauding Moonshine, was the first state University to be chartered (1785), a fact that will not impress Ronnie Cahill, H. C. quadruple threat (run, pass, kick and fumble), who wasn't born then and, hence, has no respect for antiquity. One light guess for H. C.

Colgate and Bates

BROWN-COLGATE—According to curator Dan Harkins of the Franklin Park Zoo a lean bear in mid October is exceedingly vicious because he has not stocked enough winter warming fats and energies to last during his long hibernation in the deep crevices of old tree stumps, rocky caverns, hollows and under log piles. He becomes irritable, savage and dangerous to inexperienced munters. Still the munters from Chenango Valley, N. Y., should know how to handle this. Fresh rump steak for Colgate.

Northeastern-Bates—The frost is on the pumpkin around middle Maine, where Bates makes its home in the old town of Lewiston. The streets are arboral arcades of autumn's flame, purple and ocre. The air is sweet with curly woodsmoke. Farmers, in arthritic Fords come to buy axe-helves and whiffletrees. Pigtail gals and fuzz faced lads sip chocolate double pecan sundaes at the Nick Gonopopolis Sugar Bowl. Everyone knows Wendell Mansfield, former Winchester High miracle man, and Wendie knows everybody back again in a sweet-sylvan country where the wooded hills and patchwork fields meet feathered clouds, and New England residential life is at its best. One substantial tally for Bates. Love to Northeastern.

Western Reserve, Army, Cornell

B. U.-WESTERN RESERVE—B. U. is tiptoeing through the billes of amateurism . . . well, practically. On the other hand, Western Reserve's old sanctity, under the administration of Tom Keady, Wonderland dog track judge, Cambridge restaurateur and Lowell High maestro, has recently deformed toward Big Time. So the collision tomorrow of two bodies moving in opposite direction should be terrific. One sentiment-lined vote for B. U.

Army-Columbia—The salary, while learning, of every West Point cadet is $48.20 per annum, from which his cost of maintenance is deducted and the rest banked with the post paymaster. Capt. Bill Wood, the Army coach, draws only his base army pay, or about $300 a month, with allowances for heat, light, rations and residence. Lou Little, the Columbia headcoach, gets $17,000 flat and works only four months in the year. Hence one rugged individualist vote for Army.

Princeton-Cornell—A pair of the most ivy-laden colleges of the Eastern group. Ivy is the popular name of herbs which creep, climb, crawl (the penalty for which is 5 yards from the spot). Contrary to the popular notion ivy is not parasitic. The New Jersey type (hedera helix) furnishes hederic acid which forms the base in making high grade shellack. A modest shellacking for Princeton.

N. D. and Amherst

NOTRE DAME-SOUTHERN METHODIST—Since the late and revered Knute Rockne's magic lifted N. D. from an obscure, mud puddle college in central Indiana to a kind of Everyman's variety with the largest customer appeal in the country, its terms have been strictly 50 per cent of the gate with a cash guarantee. A self-made institution, which has prospered, according to the Horatio Alger theme, versus the hereditary millionaire endowed institutions like So-Med (Peruna). N. D. needs the dough. One viva, voce vote for ole N. D.

Amherst-Tufts—Lord Jeffrey Amherst was a mystical character kept alive in college legend as "a soldier of the king." A lurid portrait of the bewigged, scarlet coated royalist hangs outside the college Inn, displaying a bulbous-nosed and gouty gaffer on a horse. The Amherst kids sing a tongue-in-the-cheek ballad which goes, "to the Frenchmen and the Indians he didn't do a thing," implying that he mangled them to mince-meat. The pictorial old geezer never knew the honor bestowed on him by being named to papa one of the quaintest college towns in New England, equal to Hanover in colonial loveliness. One antiquarian vote for Amherst.

PICK PITT OVER DUKE
IN GRID HEADLINER

The heaviest intercollegiate slate of the season, clashes between contenders in some conferences and clean records jeopardized on most fronts all combine to make this a precarious week-end for the football picker.

Tough?

Delve into your tea-leaves or crystal ball and come up with the winners of these few samples plucked at random off the cuff:

Columbia-Army, Pitt-Duke, North Carolina-New York University, Tulane-Fordham, Minnesota-Purdue, Wisconsin-Indiana, Louisiana State-Rice, Villanova-Texas Aggies and Washington-Washington State.

That's not all, but the foregoing will do for the time being. With the winners to be perhaps Army over Columbia by virtue of a quarter back named Frontczak and a tackle named Stelia; Pitt over Duke largely because the venue is Pittsburgh and North Carolina, Tulane, Indiana, Louisiana State, Texas Aggies

Infantile Hits
Coast Eleven

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 13 (AP)—Infantile paralysis has struck Loyola University's football team.

Quarterback Burch Donahue and Tackle Robert Link were hospitalized. Donahue's room-mate, center Jim Sullivan, was isolated.

Eight and Paul Sargent and 15 freshman players, were sent home as a precautionary measure.

Washington and, for the sake of variety, Minnesota and Purdue in a tie or with to more than a joint setting the issue.

Those make up some of the tougher headline battles. Narrowing the thing down to the east, Cornell has an edge on Princeton, Penn figures to shake Texas Christian may win but will have its hands full against Temple at Philadelphia, and the others should result in victories for Georgetown over Syracuse, Penn State over Indiana, Navy over Dartmouth, Brown over Colgate, Boston U. over Western Reserve, Duquesne over Marquette and Detroit over Catholic University.

College Tech goes what should be a headier against Case, while down south Mississippi over Auburn, Mississippi over Kentucky, North Carolina State over Wake Forest and Virginia Tech over Maryland may be the outcome of tonight's regional battles.

Holy Cross should take Georgia in one of the several intercollegiate battles crisscrossing Dixie eleven.

FOOTBALL FLASHES

By BILL GRIMES

Just because Boston College lost a 7 to 0 verdict to Florida yesterday at Fenway Park, don't quit on the Eagles.

After studying Ed McKeever's report of the Florida-Mississippi State game, Head Coach Frank Leahy knew that his Eagles were in for a licking from the 'Gators.

Naturally, Leahy did not divulge his prediction to the Eagles. While he was attending the football coaches' school at St. Augustine, he learned that the University of Florida was going to make plenty of trouble for its 1939 opponents and also that it would require a couple of games for Coach Josh Cody to get his charges clicking. The consensus was that the Gators would be rolling about the time they took on the Eagles.

Frank Leahy is installing the Notre Dame system at Boston College. During spring practice, the Eagles were drilled on the fundamentals of the style of play that made Knute Rockne famous. They were fairly impressive during scrimmages but a long way from perfection.

In the Notre Dame system, blocking is done with the shoulders. Just as soon as the Eagles reported for practice this fall, an epidemic of shoulder injuries hit the squad. And, those injuries were responsible for the failure of the Eagles to make a better showing than they did against the Gators.

At first, it was believed that the casualties were due to defective protection, so the latest type of shoulder guards were ordered. But, in the meantime, many of the key men were on the hospital list and the sum and substance of the whole affair was that the Eagles have had only three scrimmages this fall.

LACKED CONTACT WORK

The Notre Dame style of blocking cannot be acquired other than by contact work. It requires perfect timing, after players have mastered the knack of executing that style of blocking.

The Eagles did not register yesterday because they could not block. They missed much assignments to lose by an overwhelming score. Yet, a smooth clicking, smart Florida squad only beat them by one touchdown.

Undoubtedly, Boston College followers are running a fever today because Leo Cahill was allowed to complete a long pass from Bud Walton for the touchdown which gave the Gators their victory.

The Eagles had not only been warned to watch for that pass but they had been drilled on the defense which would break up that play, since Scout Ed McKeever's return from the Florida-Mississippi State game.

Unfortunately for Boston College, the key defensive men when that play developed, were sophomores, playing their initial major game. Sophomores are bound to make mistakes. In the first place, they are not fortified with sufficient experience to function under such a test. Then, too, they are lacking in poise, which is a very important factor whenever pressure is applied.

DAVIS NOT AT FAULT

To the inexperienced eye-witnesses of Florida's scoring play, Frank Davis was responsible for that touchdown. But, contrary to the general belief, Davis carried out his assignment perfectly. He protected his zone and when he saw that the deep area was unguarded, he turned and raced down the field. Of course it was too late, but still the Somerville boy had done his best to "double in brass."

One of the toughest football quizzes to pass is a plausible explanation of how it came to pass that Boston College, after advancing the ball for a first down on Florida's 12-yard line lost it on the 'Gators' 33 and duplicated that feat later after making a first down on the Florida 18 and relinquishing the pigskin on the 39.

On the defense, Forest Ferguson, Florida's left end, and Mush Battista, the right guard, had a first day at the expense of the Eagle ball carriers.

FERGUSON FINE END

Judging from his effectiveness yesterday, Ferguson is one of the best ends seen in Fenway Park in years. He took full advantage of the inefficiency of the Eagle blockers and spent most of the afternoon in the Boston College backfield.

Ferguson was good but Battista was great.

Battista played a roving guard. When the Eagles shifted to the left, Battista stayed in the line but when they "hipped" to the right he came out and slipped outside and about three yards behind the right end, waiting for the reverse plays. And, he piled them up like nobody's business.

Battista played such sensational and effective football that he was presented with the football after the game by Coach Josh Cody. The Eagles were beaten by Florida, but they had a medicine from here in, it's just possible that the setback will instill more determination in the squad, and that each and every player now realizes that he must do his blocking in order to have the ball carriers advance.

Naturally, Head Coach Frank Leahy and his assistants are "down." They realize that Florida was strong and felt that a defeat was in store for them. But they also saw where their charges passed up many opportunities to at least tie the game.

Green in Form For Navy Game

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 13 (AP)—At full strength for the first time this season, Dartmouth's Indians entrained last night for Baltimore, where they meet Navy tomorrow in the first major contest of their 1939 football schedule.

The return of Dick Kerating, injured center, brought the varsity squad to its full complement of 33. The squad had a brief drill today at Baltimore Municipal Stadium and stressed its passing attack, indicating the Green will rely heavily on this attack against the Navy.

N. Y. Americans Start Ice Practice

PORT ARTHUR, Oct. 13 (AP)—The New York Americans of the National Hockey League opened training here as Manager Mervyn (Red) Dutton sent them through a selling practice. Scrimmage sessions will start today.

B. C.'s Shoddy Blocking Due To Inability to Scrimmage

By DAVE GLUECK

"Lack of scrimmage work defeated the boys," said Frank Leahy after a hard fighting Florida team had sipped by Boston College 7-0. "I knew the lads would be ragged in there," the Eagle coach declared. "If ever a team needed scrimmage, we did, but injuries made it impossible.

All three B. C. fullbacks and several other squad members were injured in the rough St. Joseph's encounter, making contact work impossible in preparing for the Gators.

Signal drill is obviously not enough to get Northerners toughened up for the South. Last week Joe Sheeketski learned this, now Frank Leahy has had his suspicions confirmed.

B. C. BLOCKING POOR

The Boston College blocking was so spotty that almost all the sting was taken out of the running attack, and when, in desperation, the Eagles took to the air, weakness in this same department prevented any coupon-clipping.

Chuckling Charlie O'Rourke was rushed throughout the game and smothered four or five times before he could find a receiver. O'Rourke never stopped trying, and Leahy had only praise for his indomitable spirit, but pass protection was so poor that several times Forest Ferguson, outstanding Florida wing, was never even thrown off stride as he slashed in at little Charlie.

It's hard to find an excuse for this; pass protection is one of the simpler facets of the game and usually mastered by high school teams.

Eagle interference was running high and not very hard. The Gators continually threw the B. C. guards back into the laps of their own ball carriers, thus saving themselves the trouble of making the tackles.

TEAMS STRONG IN DEFENSE

Both clubs were strong defensively. Except for one lapse in their pass defense, when Gator Cahill took a long one over his shoulder from Walton for the single score of the game, B. C. was a hard team to make land against.

Florida staved off Boston power by changing their line from a defensive huddle. When the Eagles shifted to the right with O'Rourke back, The Gators left five men on their frontier, and pulled battering Battista, right guard, into the secondary for added pass protection. When the shift was to the left, the Florida center joined the front half dozen, to stop a running attack. In between times an extremely strong southern sextet stopped B. C. advances.

Steve Levantis, who replaced the injured Manzo at left tackle for Boston College, was the best man in their line. The few times that Levantis carried the ball, he displayed his usual form. "Tarz" Toczykowiak, in spite of an injured shoulder, blocked capably, but as Leahy pointed out after the St. Joe's encounter he still needs quarterbacking experience.

RACE TRACK jockeys announce they are going to organize a guild which will regulate fees and riding conditions . . . The jockeys say they won't pull any sit-down strikes when up on favorites . . . Jockeys receive $10 for riding, and an additional $15 if their horse wins . . . As a matter of custom, most owners pay a jockey 10 per cent of a winning purse . . . This runs into big money in stake races . . . It is not uncommon for top jockeys like George Woolf, Don Meade, Eddie Arcaro and Nick Wall to earn between $25,000 and $50,000 a year.

This is only one side of the picture . . . Other less fortunate jockeys are happy if they earn $2000 to $3000 a year . . . Every time the thoroughbreds break from the barrier, death is riding in the race . . . There have been numerous cases where jockeys have been killed as a result of being thrown in races . . . The jockeys believe they are entitled to more money for riding, and better working conditions . . . Lou Smith at Rockingham Park improved the conditions in the jockey room when he installed cots and an electric cabinet . . . The electric cabinet has been helpful to those jockeys who have been obliged to make weight.

Baseball players once tried to form a union, but it didn't work, and was abandoned . . . Organized ball players might insist that the Yanks permit a National League club to win at least one game in a World Series.

Radio has been placed on the spot by baseball . . . The Southern league is considering banning baseball broadcasts next year, while Ed Barrow of the Yanks isn't certain the world's champions will permit their games to be sent out on the airways next season . . . Radio broadcasting of ball games was tried by the Yanks and Giants for the first time this year . . . The Yanks experienced a sharp falling off in attendance at home games . . . Barrow isn't certain whether this was due to the radio broadcasts or to the fact Yanks victories have become quite monotonous to many of the fans.

Frankie Frisch says he is glad to be managing the Pirates as he likes to have something about which to worry . . . Frankie declares that following his baseball broadcasts in Boston this year, all he had to do was to go to his home in Schuette for a dinner and a swim . . . Frankie at times would remain in Boston to listen to Casey Stengel's troubles with the Bees . . . Frisch is at heart a baseball man more than anything else, and enjoys the action and the heartaches that go with leading a major league club.

Harvard Expected to Win Easily

HARVARD IS expected to score an easy victory when it opposes the University of Chicago in Chicago on Saturday . . . With everybody declaring Dick Harlow's eleven has no real opposition, the Crimson is placed very much on the spot . . . It must win or lose prestige.

Harold (Swede) Nelson, 220-pound end, will be in the Navy lineup when the Middies collide with Dartmouth on Saturday . . . Nelson has been out of the game for two weeks with a sprained ankle . . . Dartmouth has staged several secret practice sessions as it has prepared for its session with the Navy . . . This should be one of the top Saturday games.

Bob Pastor, who was knocked out in eleven rounds by Joe Louis, will box Nathan Mann and Max Baer under plans being made by Mike Jacobs of the Twentieth Century Club . . . Pastor has also been offered a bout with Tony Musto in Chicago, but is not expected to accept it . . . The Mann match should give Pastor the tune-up he requires for a session with Baer . . . Max has been campaigning in the Far West, but is unlikely to ever regain his old ring magic.

Leo Durocher is trying to get a three-year contract as manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers . . . Larry MacPhail would like to sign Durocher to a one-year contract, but hasn't a chance to do so . . . Durocher points to the fact Frankie Frisch, who had been out of active baseball, received a two-year contract from the Pirates . . . Durocher played in 100 games this year in addition to furnishing the spark that carried the Dodgers to third place in the National League.

Pedrice Reine is coming up from Louisville to play shortstop for the Dodgers next season . . . Pedrice is five feet seven inches tall, and is billed as a human dynamo . . . Durocher will probably take part in an occasional game, but now that he has clicked as a manager, Leo is willing to run his ball club from the bench.

Random Shots at Target

HENRY CHMIELEWSKI, Polish middleweight, will have Howell King of Detroit as an opponent in a ten-round bout in Worcester tonight . . . King recently won a decision over Lou Brouillard in Worcester, and insists he will add the free swinging Chmielewski to his list of victims . . . Western Reserve, which plays Boston University here on Saturday, has most of the power back that enabled it to win over Pat Hanley's club a year ago . . . This will be the only college game in Boston on Saturday . . . It looks as if the schedule makers were not very co-operative with each other.

There is considerable interest in the Yale-Penn game at New York . . . Due to Yale's victory over Columbia, and to the fact Penn will oppose Harvard in the Stadium a week from Saturday.

MEDFORD PRIMPS HOODOO

By MICHAEL GILLOOLY

Off its performance last Saturday, Medford high school eleven should stretch its odd record of blanking Somerville from the victory column again tomorrow afternoon in the feature game of the split schoolboy program.

In moving into a deadlock against Brockton in their last start, the Mystics also moved into the slightest shade of favoritism over their undefeated, untied and unscored upon rivals.

For the first five years of the series which started in 1909, Somerville enjoyed an unchallenged edge, but since 1913 the club has failed to beat Medford. Seven deadlocks have been played over the quarter of a century jinx period with the 18 games falling on the Medford side of the fence.

Although the hoodoo is reason enough for stringing along with Coach Tom O'Connor's eleven, the grand comeback to a seven-point against last year's Class A champions, Brockton, gives them a single touchdown margin in this contest.

ZARELLA MEDFORD THREAT

Capt. Larry Zarella and Chuck Edgerly will be the heavy threats in the Medford offensive, while Tito Margarita heads a line that has been reputed one of the best defensively since the start of the season.

In Somerville hopes run high that this club will be the one to break the Medford string. Cambridge Latin, Wakefield, Chelsea and most recently Waltham have tasted thumps as Coach Art McManus' outfit romped near the top of the list of eligible State champions.

Mary Ego, Eddie Melillo and Fran Gough will hold Somerville's hopes of slipping into the scoring column. This trio have led the attack in the four victories and will hand the Medford line a stiff test before the game is over.

Meanwhile, Malden steps into a serious test against Arlington at the Pearl St. Stadium, where the Golden Tornado will seek its fourth straight triumph. Against Haverhill Saturday, the McGuirk A. C. rang up 31 points as a warning to the invaders.

ARLINGTON HAS CHANCE

Coach Fred Ostergren's crew, paced by Art Blanchard, stands a fine chance of turning in an upset over the favored home team.

Everett's challengers take on a comparative breather at Dickinson Field, with Coach Owen MacDowell's Newton eleven playing the role of host. Coach Dennis Guidici's boys have looked very impressive in their two victories to date and should welcome the let-up that this tilt should present.

Saugus entertains Amesbury and Watertown invades Winthrop.

Chelsea's co-state champions of last year will probably take another fall before a heavy Quincy high with Brookline expected to hand Coach Harry Downs another win with Boston Latin in the victim's role.

CRANSTON, R. I., Oct. 13 (AP)—Staging a 95-yard drive in the fourth period the Paterson Panthers broke a 7-7 deadlock and captured their fourth victory in six American Football Association starts as they downed the Providence Steam Roller, 14-7, before 3500 fans.

Six-Man Football Hit at Durham, N. H.

DURHAM, N. H., Oct. 13.—Six-man football has invaded the University of New Hampshire.

It is not because Coach George Sauer is lacking in material, but because the fraternity and dormitory men in the intramural program have passed up touch football in favor of a more strenuous game.

This fall 13 fraternities and five dormitory teams are competing for group honors in the new game. Equipped in ancient varsity uniforms, bearing the scars of now famous gridiron battles, the undergraduates present an enthusiastic, if not trim, sight.

Smelt Run Keeps Anglers in Happy Frame of Mind

By DARK MONTREAL

In all our New England coasts the smelt are reported running. And the fish are "so thick they threaten navigation," according to the usually sober and conservative Massachusetts Fish and Game Association.

Says the association's bulletin:

"They are running four to the pound and take best on the half flood to half ebb tides. Best bait seems to be seaworms with shrimp running a close second as creel fillers."

The M. F. G. A. writer comments that the smelt, while not considered strictly a game fish, will nevertheless furnish plenty of sport when taken on light tackle.

He says further that he has never tried it but he thinks there is no reason why smelt would not take a small streamer or bucktail fly.

At least one reputed smelt expert of the Boston Evening American's engraving room staff begs to differ on that issue. He says the smelt is too slow and cautious a feeder to go for artificial lures.

So, okay, you Dark Montreal readers. You can take it from there.

Bob Harris of Raymonds says Massachusetts sportsmen should be proud to welcome to their brotherhood a group of anglers who seldom get their names in the newspapers or pose with record fish, but who nevertheless are true and philosophic followers of old Ike Walton's precepts.

These are our American citizens of Chinese parentage, according to Harris.

He says:

"I know a dozen Chinese who are skillful and enthusiastic fishermen. They are the kind of sportsmen who appreciate good tackle and like to use the best."

"They are never fish hogs. They just go fishing for the love of it. And little things like one or two of them have let slip in conversation have convinced me they love the New England outdoors as much or more than any of us."

"I don't think many of the Chinese go hunting. Back in the country of their ancestors, few guns are in private hands. They've no tradition of shooting or marksmanship for a sport in itself, as we Americans do, from successive past generations."

"Just the same, a friend of mine working in a gun store in New York told me he had a great rush of business from Chinese customers a couple of years or more ago."

"They kept coming in and buying big game rifles. Sometimes one at a time, sometimes two. Sometimes half a dozen. They were all United States citizens. They had a right to the weapons. But my friend, for a long time, couldn't figure it out. It certainly didn't seem to him, that there were many prospective moose or deer or bear killers among his Chinese patrons."

"Of course, he guessed that some of the guns might be going to China, to help arm the Chinese national army. But he couldn't see how it was possible."

"Then a young Chinese student put an end to the mystery. He explained to my friend:

"Every time one of the older residents of our Chinatown here dies, his family ships his body back to China. And in every coffin, before it is sealed up, we put a couple of rifles. That way for one of our own people dead, we maybe fix it to kill a couple of dozen Japanese."

Charlie Gilbert says there are a lot of hungry black bass in Lily Pond in Saugus. He has taken several good ones, mostly casting from shore with one of the trick baits that lets your line slip through just far enough—and no further. You need weedless hooks there, Charlie advises.

He's had his best luck after sunset.

More reports come to this department daily of how plentiful the gray squirrels are up in New Hampshire this season.

And that prompts the plea. For the sake of next year's hunters, go a little easy now, some of you gray squirrel killing dead shots. It's nice to see the frisky, fluffy-tailed fellows around.

"Knock over enough for a squirrel pie, if you want to. But be regular and quit when you've got your legal limit."

There's another angle, too. Those N. H. game wardens consider the gray squirrel a high test animal to their State's well-planned conservation methods.

And they're prepared to be plenty tough with gent who law-breaking upsels the N. H. conservation appreciat.

Williams Visits Yawkey as Boss Leaves Hospital

Thomas Austin Yawkey, Red Sox president, left Brooks Hospital this morning minus the cartilage in his knee. He was able to navigate comfortably today and was singing the praises of Dr. Tommy Richards, who performed the operation. Yawkey will stick around here for a few days, then go to his Georgetown, South Carolina, plantation for the hunting season.

Ted Williams, Sox rookie outfielder, visited Yawkey before his release and brought along Freddie Slack, Sox bat boy.

Williams is bringing Slack to Minneapolis with him for a two weeks' visit, and promised the kid that he would have a lower berth back on the train.

BRUINS SQUAD OFF FOR CAMP TOMORROW

Season Opens Three Weeks From Tonight

By BILL GRIMES

At an early hour this morning, Arthur Howie Ross and Ralph C. Weiland, who are alleged to be connected with the Boston Bruins' hockey club, arrived in Toronto and checked in at the Hotel Royal York.

Although Ross and Weiland refused to talk for publication, it is rumored that they will take a squad of hockey players "over the line" tomorrow night and head for Hershey, Pa.

Shortly after Ross and Weiland established their checking-in station in the Queen City, Walter Randall, the Bruins' property man, en-trained for the Chocolate Town, as a personal escort to the hockey equipment.

HAMIE ON SIDELINES

Randall was to have been accompanied to Hershey, Pa. by Hamie Moore but two days ago the latter was a victim of an acute attack of appendicitis. Hamie will not report to the Bruins until the N. H. L. season is well underway.

Due to the enforced absence of Moore from the Bruins' training camp, Win Green, the old maestro, who had planned to take a well-deserved vacation, is packing his sport clothes and will leave tomorrow for Hershey, Pa.

ROSS, WEILAND ON HAND

Arthur Howie Ross and Ralph C. Weiland will spend today and tomorrow checking in their Bruins preparatory to taking off for the Chocolate Town, and with the kind indulgence of the United States Immigration, they will escort about 40 puck chasers to Hershey.

While the college football coaches whose teams take it on the chin tomorrow are trying to figure out what happened on the Sabbath, the Bruins will hold their initial practice sessions of the year.

Three weeks from tonight the Bruins will open the 1939-40 season against the Maple Leafs in Toronto and then they will practice at the Boston Arena for five days before journeying to Detroit for a Sunday night game with the Red Wings.

Billy Direct Sets World's Record

ALTMONT, N. Y., Oct. 13 (AP)—Billy Direct, owned by Dan McConville of Ogdensburg, N. Y., and Pat Downey, Worcester, Mass., set a new world's pacing record of two minutes flat for one mile on a half-mile track.

Driven by William Fleming and paced by an automobile, Billy Direct flashed over the last quarter of the Altamont Fair grounds oval in 29 seconds to cut three-quarters of a second off the old mile mark he set at Rutland, Vt., earlier this year.

BURNAM REPLACES DELANEY IN ELI LINE

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 13 (AP)—The Yale football team drilled defensively against Pennsylvania plays in preparation for tomorrow's game.

As part of the workout Coach Gerry Ford's junior varsity eleven was pitted against the varsity Bulldogs and observers reported that the regulars had little difficulty in breaking up the payvees' plays.

Harold Whiteman, hurt in the game with Columbia last Saturday, was excused from contact work. Officials said, however, that he would definitely start in the wing-back position against Penn.

The line will be the same as that starting against Columbia, except for Burnam in place of Delaney.

Challedon Seeking New Laurels

NEW YORK, Oct. 13 (AP)—Simply because there's nothing wrong with him that a bag of oats won't cure, Challedon now stands as the undisputed king of the three-year-old racing world.

Johnstown and Eight-Thirty, his two leading challengers for the crown, couldn't hold up under the heat of the campaigning, so W. L. Brann's "Big Pete," with nothing left to conquer in his own league, now has to step into a higher class to take a crack at the year's all-age championship.

The war ruined Challedon's chances for a trip to England this fall and a try at the Ascot Gold Cup next year. As a result Challedon's Big Boy will take his chances in the Pimlico Special Nov. 1 against the only other horse to challenge his right to the top spot for 1939, Charles S. Howard's South American bred Kayak II.

Three other horses are slated to go postward in the $10,000 winner-take-all event, but a victory for one of this trio would go down as the year's No. 1 upset.

N. E. 147 King In Arena Show

Stunned by the successes of the Rhode Islanders in the Golden Glove trial tournaments being staged weekly at the Arena, Al "Red" Priest, New England's 147-pound champion, will make a comeback next Monday night.

Priest is generally considered the class of the amateurs, pound for pound. He has held sway here for the past two years, and today would be a top notch pro were there any pro boxing in Boston.

Providence has been stealing Boston's thunder in the tournaments to date, and will send up another top-notch Monday in Paul Verdetti, who, under the name of Albert De Roma, smashed his way to victory over Charlie Morris and others in the 118-pound class two weeks ago. Verdetti next Monday will compete in the 112-pound class, and he is figured to bring one more championship award back to Rhode Island. He is trained by the same chap who brought Larry Bolvin to the front two years ago.

Arc Lights Big Help To Baseball

CHICAGO, Oct. 13 (AP)—Thanks to night baseball, American League attendance this year gained a "draw" with that of the very good 1938 season, William Harridge, junior circuit president said.

"In spite of inclement weather which postponed several opening season games and numerous big Sunday programs, we drew about as many fans this season as we did last," Harridge said. "Night baseball in Philadelphia, Cleveland and Chicago was one of the biggest reasons our figures stayed up to the 1938 standard."

(In Chicago, more than 200,000 fans paid to see seven night contests at Comiskey Park, home of the White Sox.)

Quarterbacks Do Forget

Nomination for the best mid-western true story of the young gridiron season; Michigan had the ball on Michigan State's two-yard line last Saturday. Forrest Evanski, Michigan quarterback, sent Tom Harmon through the line, Harmon carrying the ball over for a touchdown.

But Evanski thought the referee had called the play back and when the ball was placed on the 2-yard line for the conversion attempt, Evanski again sent Harmon crashing between the tackles. This time Harmon was stopped cold—and only then did Evanski learn Harmon had picked up six points on his first smash and lost one on his second.

Facts and rumors on the Chicago Cub's managerial situation: Facts—P. K. Wrigley, Cub president, has interviewed no one on the subject of replacing Gabby Hartnett. Rumors—That Hartnett will remain another season; Wrigley only is "hot" now about the way his boys folded up against the White Sox in the City series, but he also out, because Hartnett reportedly failed to contact him from prior to the spring trip until mid-season.

Punts and dashes—Minnesota must be slipping... Some Midwest observers who have picked the Gophers to win every game for the past five or six seasons are switching to Purdue as the choice tomorrow.

Sportsman's Park, Chicago's half mile oval, is running ahead of 1938 in mutual play... Last season the average was $200,000 daily and the best day thus far was last Saturday's $330,000.

Colantonio Takes Sullivan's Place

LEWISTON, Me., Oct. 13—Back in its own class after a good battle with Harvard last week, Bates will play host to Northeastern here tomorrow. The home Bobcats are rated as heavy favorites to down the injury-riddled Huskies from Boston.

Northeastern's varsity squad of 32 players arrived here today and practiced at the Bates field. Half a dozen of the Huskies were not in uniform, because of injuries and several more were not expected to be available.

Ernie Colantonio of Boston, sophomore three-sport star, will take Capt. Connie Sullivan's place at left end for the Huskies. Dean Williams will be back at tackle and Art Anderson has regained his center berth.

The backfield has Bob Gurney joining Sonny Yetten, Ronny Tubbs and Jack Caswell. The latter is the outstanding running threat in the Husky attack, while Gurney will do the forward passing.

The Huskies are fearful of the versatile Bates backfield after the showing made at the Stadium last Saturday. Harry Gorman, former Boston Latin star, and Mike Bucross of Jamaica Plain, will team with the flashy Art Belliveau to bother the invaders.
